BRAZIL PRACTICALLY ENTERS WAR ON AXIS

Recalls Merchant Ships and Plans Open Declaration

Vargas Points Out He Has Sole Power To Declare Nation at War

Confiscation of Axis Property in Brazil Expected Soon

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 11 (AP)—Brazil was given pointed notice tonight that President Getulio Vargas holds single-handed power to declare war, and further indication of this nation's approach to open hostilities appeared in the withdrawal of all Brazilian merchant ships from seas where at least four have been sunk by the Axis.

President Vargas by decree reiterated his constitutional powers to declare war or a state of national emergency and cleared the way for seizure of Axis subjects and property without further ado.

Brazil's anger toward the Axis was indicated by headlines on the latest known sinking, news of which was withheld until early tonight.

Diario Da Noite carried the big line: "Reich goes on assassinating Brazilians."

An editorial in the government-controlled A Noite was headed: "One more Axis crime."

O Globo blamed the sinkings on Fifth Columnists, "who spread along the whole coast and who are supplying Hitler's submarines."

Will Seize Axis Property
Confiscation of Axis property in Brazil was expected, orders on what to seize already having been drafted.

Brazil broke relations with the Axis on the last day of the pan-American conference, which in January unanimously recommended such a rupture.

Accusations against Japan of improper treatment of Brazilian diplomats have followed, but it is the sinkings of Brazilian ships in the Atlantic in the past three weeks which have brought Brazil to the sharpest of cross-purposes with the Axis.

Sailings of Brazilian merchantmen to the United States were suspended and all those en route were ordered home or to the nearest port. It was on this route that Axis submarines sank the four Brazilian vessels.

Two Ships Sunk
By U. S. Bombers

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—The War department reported today that eight heavy American bombers, raiding Japanese shipping in the harbor of Salamaua, New Guinea, left two ships sinking, four on fire and one beached on the shore.

The force of bombers, commanded by Major Richard H. Carmichael, dropped eighteen tons of bombs on Japanese ships in the harbor, the department said. None of the planes was damaged.

Smashing Enemy Aerial Superiority Credited by Returning U. S. Admiral for Winning Campaign

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—Smashing Japanese aerial superiority that showed up at every crucial phase of battle was credited by Admiral Thomas C. Hart today with having produced victory for the enemy in the first great campaign of the Pacific war.

British Forces Prepare To Fight North of Rangoon

Expect Japs To Attempt To Resume Offensive At Early Date

By DANIEL DELUCE

MANDALAY, Burma, March 11 (AP)—British forces some 150 miles north of lost Rangoon braced themselves today for expected assaults on Toungoon and Prome by Japanese who already have gained possession of the broad Irrawaddy delta of lower Burma.

The two cities are eighty miles apart and about one-third of the distance from Rangoon to Mandalay.

Unofficially the Japanese were reported to have reached a village sixteen miles south of Toungoon and to have established contact with bands of rebellious Burmese along the Irrawaddy river for an attack on Prome.

Petroleum Group Asks Reduction Of 25 Per Cent

Coordinator Indicates He Will Grant Request of Producers

All Gasoline Stations Likely To Be Closed Every Night

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—A card system of rationing gasoline to 10,000,000 motorists in the east to cut consumption by twenty-five per cent was proposed today by the petroleum industry in view of the sinking and war diversion of tanker ships.

Until the rationing cards can be printed, which might require several weeks, the industry recommended that motor fuel deliveries to filling stations be cut by one-fourth, with the stations apportioning their supplies among their customers.

The industry report proposed also that all filling stations in the eastern states be closed from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m., that immediate action be taken to reduce deliveries of fuel oil, and that a pipe line be constructed from the Gulf area to the New York-Philadelphia area.

Ickes To Act Promptly
Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, who yesterday described the supply situation as "very acute," said he would act promptly, but could not say to what extent he would follow the industry's recommendations.

The area affected by the restriction proposals embraces the seventeen seaboard states and the District of Columbia. The report hinted that rationing also might be necessary later in other areas.

Limitation of supplies to filling stations numbering about 100,000 and the curfew were adopted last summer and fall in the east when approximately 100 tanker ships, which normally supply the seaboard by hauling oil from Gulf to Atlantic ports, were loaned to Britain.

First Cut Ten Per Cent
Many service stations then met the limited supplies situation by allowing each purchaser only a small number of gallons. Some re-

Many Automobiles In Maryland Junkyards

BALTIMORE, March 11 (AP)—A war Production Board spokesman said today a recent survey showed there were 272 yards in the state with five or more cars and a statewide total of 13,696 junked autos.

Total estimated scrap tonnage in the rusting vehicles is 9,171 tons. A WPA drive now is under way to move these automobiles to steel mills.

By coincidence, emphasizing what air power can do, the war department announced a short time after Hart had spoken out, that eight heavy American bombers had sunk two Japanese ships, set four on fire and beached another in a raid on the harbor of Salamaua, New Guinea, a Japanese-held port.

The force which blasted these seven Jap ships was under command of Major Richard H. Carmichael, the department's commander, adding that eighteen tons of bombs had dropped in the attack, and "all our planes returned to their base undamaged."

(Such an attack had been described earlier in the day in dispatches from Canberra, Australia, but the Australian announcement did not describe the attacking planes as American.)

Previously Japan's total ship losses by American action had been 138 vessels of all types.

Indications were that air raids of this type weakening the enemy's vital supply facilities would constitute the principal American action for some time to come.

Need More of Everything
In this connection, Admiral King told the reporters that he subscribed to the idea that "defense will not win this war." But, he added, "we've got to have more ships, more guns, more everything," and meantime "we must do the best we can with what we've got."

Hart, who was relieved of his command because of ill health, has just returned to Washington. Knox

Anti-Strike Law Is Sidetracked By Union Heads

Green and Murray Succeed in Stopping Proposed Legislation

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—The CIO and AFL combined efforts today to sidetrack a House measure requiring government registration of labor unions, trade and business associations, as the Senate heard a request by Senator Lee (D-Okla.) for the immediate passage of anti-strike legislation.

In statements to the House judiciary committee, both William Green, president of the AFL, and Phillip Murray, CIO chief, denounced the registration measure proposed by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval Affairs committee.

"We cannot afford," Murray said, "to take time out from our drive to victory in order to engage in a revival of the petty sniping and labor baiting which a bill of this type represents."

Green asserted that the bill would destroy the voluntary character of labor unions and would not "remove any instance of labor racketeering that may exist."

Meanwhile, Lee was telling the Senate that the question of "racketeering" in labor unions should be studied and prevented.

"It is not right for an American to have to pay for the privilege of working," he declared. "I have heard that exorbitant fees have been charged before workers could get employment. If this is true, it should be stopped at once. The industrial profiteer and the labor racketeer must both be eliminated."

Lee made it clear that he felt that organized labor had kept its December pledge of "no strikes" in defense industries, but that because of "some exceptions to this fine pledge of loyalty" by "a small percentage of labor and management"

50,000-Ton German Dreadnaught Chased into Port by the British

LONDON, March 11. (AP)—The 50,000-ton super-dreadnaught Tirpitz, ghost ship of the German navy, has been spotted at sea, attacked by British torpedo planes, and chased to refuge in Norway, the admiralty announced tonight.

The bare facts of this first known battle with Germany's newest and finest battleship were contained in a five-sentence communique which suggested that strong naval forces of both sides were operating off Norway in the opening phases of what is expected to become a prolonged battle for control of the supply line to Russia.

The Nazis in this case risked the Tirpitz and probably others of their best warships in a futile attempt upon a British convoy. Qualified sources said the convoy was a large one carrying war materials to Russia.

"Best Doggone Mule" Trapped Eight Days

BOULDER, Colo., March 11 (AP)—Only a little gaunt in the flanks, Teddy, a veteran mine mule, was led blinking into sunlight today after eight days' imprisonment behind a fall of coal in the Crackerjack mine.

Joe Robertson, mine lessee, dished up rations of hay and grain for Teddy, and the mule chomped eagerly his first meal since the cave in grazed his hide and trapped him.

Eight volunteers picked and shoveled their way through about sixty feet of blocked tunnel to help Robertson rescue the mule.

"Teddy," says Robertson, "is the best-working doggone mule I ever saw."

Roosevelt Reports on Progress of Lease-Lend Movement

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—Reporting a total of $2,570,452,444 Lend-Lease help for the United Nations in the last year, President Roosevelt bluntly told Congress today that "what has been done falls far short of what is needed to turn the tide toward victory."

The war will be won, he asserted, "only by contact with the enemies, and by attack upon them." It takes time and "more and still more equipment and transportation" to organize the offensive, he said. "Success will come clearly at the price of defeats and losses," he added.

"The offensive that the United Nations must, and will drive into the heart of the Axis will take the entire strength that we possess."

Only Fraction of Total
The $2,570,452,444 in assistance extended is but a fraction of the total Lend-Lease funds of $48,006,650,000 authorized by Congress, and when broken down, it includes but $1,411,000,000 in actual transfers of materials.

Of the remainder, $448,000,000 is awaiting transfer or use, $128,000,000 is in process of manufacture, $126,000,000 was in repairing and servicing ships of United Nations, $243,000,000 was in the rental or charter of ships, and $170,000,000 was invested in production facilities in the United States.

Up to American Industry

However, nearly $12,985,000,000—the total of the first two Lend-Lease appropriations—has been obligated or is covered by contracts already let. Further progress lies in the rapidity with which American industry can convert itself to war time production. Mr. Roosevelt repeatedly emphasized that the combined and total effort of the nation is needed.

Japs Lose Seven Ships, but Keep Driving Forward

Convoys Believed Ready To Attempt Landing at Port Moresby

Furious Air Battles Reported in New Britain Area

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA, March 11. (AP)—Aerial defenders of Australia, beating back at the gathering peril to their homeland, reported today the destruction of at least seven and perhaps nine ships from Japanese invasion trains but amid the wreckage of his transports the enemy still came on.

Hard hit off the area of lodgements on the northeastern coast of New Guinea island, the enemy appeared next off the south coast of the island, and large new convoys were reported heading for Port Moresby, the nearest major harbor to the mainland, lying across only 300 miles of water from Cape York on the Northern Australian tip.

It was to the north, around Salamaua in Huon Gulf, that the invader had suffered his greatest known loss.

Two Ships Known Sunk
There, it was announced officially, two of his ships definitely sunk in the first phases of Australian counteraction; four were left afloat, and one was beached and abandoned. Moreover, two other enemy ships—cruisers or big destroyers—were attacked and believed damaged in this raid, which was begun yesterday.

No estimate was attempted of enemy loss of life. All over the waters of New Guinea and New Britain, where the invader sometime ago also had obtained beachheads in the area of Gasmata, the skies were disorderly with aerial assault and counter-assault.

Port Moresby, the most likely major marshalling point for the full-scale spring upon this sub-continent now expected at any time, was attacked during the day by twelve enemy bombers which perhaps had the objective of seeking to reduce the defenses there for the apparently imminent attempt at landings from the sea. The damage wrought was undetermined.

Details Kept Secret
Most members of Parliament believed the Churchill plan offered evidence demanded by some Indians but more than post-war introduction of self-government. They felt also that it contained an important military condition which would leave Britain in full control of military operations in and from India to the end of the war; moreover, it was believed likely the United States, which is sending a technical mission to India, was underwriting the independence plan.

Churchill first recalled the government's August, 1940, promise of full dominion status for India as soon as possible after the war. Now, he said, the war cabinet, "in order to clothe these general declarations with precision and to convince all classes, races and creeds in India of our sincere resolve, . . . have unitedly agreed upon conclusions for present and future action."

These conclusions, he explained, would avoid "the alternative dangers: Either that resistance of a powerful minority might impose an indefinite veto upon the wishes of the majority, or that a majority decision might be taken which would be resisted to a point destructive of internal harmony and fatal to the setting up of a new constitution."

American Vessel Sunk in Pacific
SAN FRANCISCO, March 11 (AP)—The Matson navigation company's 3,275-ton freighter Malama was presumed lost in the Pacific by the navy today. The disclosure of radio messages from the ship indicated she was followed by an unidentified plane on Jan. 1.

Twelfth naval district headquarters said the radio station at Papete, Tahiti, received a message from the Malama reporting she was being followed. Later another communication received at Rarotonga, Cook Island, said she was "ordered to stop by an unidentified plane."

The British admiralty disclosed later that the Malama was "lost by surface attack," the navy said. The Malama, built in 1919 at Newark, N. J., carried a crew of 33. Her master was Capt. Malcolm R. Peters of San Mateo.

Legislative Council Discusses Compensation Payroll Tax Plan

BALTIMORE, March 11 (AP)—The Legislative Council today discussed a proposal to levy unemployment compensation payroll taxes against Maryland employers in proportion to the stability of their labor forces.

After members of the Unemployment Compensation Board described studies of merit-rating payroll taxes in other states, the council instructed the board to draw up a bill for its consideration and possible presentation to the 1943 legislature.

All employers are now taxed a flat 2.7 per cent of their payroll. Under the proposed plan, they might be taxed as little as 0.9 per cent if they had a high record of employee stability or as much as 2.7 if the turnover was rapid.

Stephen C. Cromwell, director for the board, said the state now had a $38,000,000 compensation reserve fund and expected a $50,000,000 reserve before 1943. He warned that (Continued on Page 16, Col. 1)

Dies Committee Is Continued by Vole of 331-46

Chairman Says He Will Seek $300,000 for Year's Work

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—The House committee investigating un-American activities won a fourth year's lease on life today and Chairman Dies (D-Tex) promptly announced that he would seek an appropriation of $300,000 to finance its work until next Jan. 3. The committee's funds in the past have averaged $100,000 a year.

Foes of the committee mustered more votes than they ever had before as the House, on a roll-call vote of 331 to 46, approved its continuance.

Debate was short and sharp, critics contending the committee might interfere with the war program and accusing it of plagiarism and inefficiency, and proponents insisting it was a safeguard against Fifth-Columnists.

Dies Scores "Minority"
Dies accused a "well-organized minority" of attempting to impede the committee and charged that "more money has been spent in the last four weeks to discredit this committee" than Congress would appropriate for its work.

Dies attacked Rep. Marcantonio (AL-NY) for having "filled the record with misstatements." He denied Marcantonio's charges that much of the committee's recent report on Japanese activities had been plagiarized and that a map published with the report was available in many places.

Defending the committee's past work, Dies said that every prominent Nazi agent it investigated and exposed had been convicted on committee-gathered evidence.

Rep. Sabath (D-Ill.) accused the group of having failed to investigate "the real fascists and Nazis in this country that are really doing harm."

Known by Its Friends
The character of the committee's enemies and friends, said Rep. Mason (R-Ill.), a committee member, "tells the story in a nutshell more eloquently than I can." Among the enemies he listed Fritz Kuhn, former German-American Bund leader, the Communist party, the National Lawyers' Guild, the International Labor Defense and the International Workers' Order. As friends he listed the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the DAR, the Knights of Columbus, Catholic Churches, Women's Clubs and the American Federation of Labor.

Marcantonio interrupted with an assertion that the Ku Klux Klan also endorsed the committee.

Rep. Elliot (D-Mass.) said he opposed the committee because it had "smeared and damaged the reputation of hundreds of decent, loyal Americans" and had made a record of "big promises and little or no performance."

British Forces

and border on the East would leave the Japanese right flank endangered by Chinese forces, the invaders apparently were preparing to take this risk in the hope of getting at Mandalay, pivot of Burma's continuing offense.

Aided by Americans
It was reported meanwhile that the Chinese in the Shan states, on the eastern end of the new Allied Burma line, would be supported by large numbers of American planes. These troops are now taking their full share in defense of Central Burma under the British commander, Lieut. Gen. H. R. L. G. Alexander.

Chinese sources said earlier defeats abroad in Burma might have been forestalled if Chinese troops had been put into action sooner.

They said thousands of skilled Chinese veterans had been immobilized on the Thailand and Indo-China borders, the Japanese there being just active enough to prevent the Chinese from being ordered south to defend Rangoon.

British Losses Heavy
Rangoon's loss, always regarded as probable because of its comparatively exposed position, likewise might have been long delayed except for serious depletion of some of Britain's best Imperial battalions in the battles between the Bilin and Sittoung rivers in mid-February.

The lower Sittoung river bridge was destroyed Feb. 23, before British withdrawal was complete, entailing further heavy losses. Armored forces arriving later at the front lacked sufficient infantry support to keep the Japanese from crossing the Sittoung.

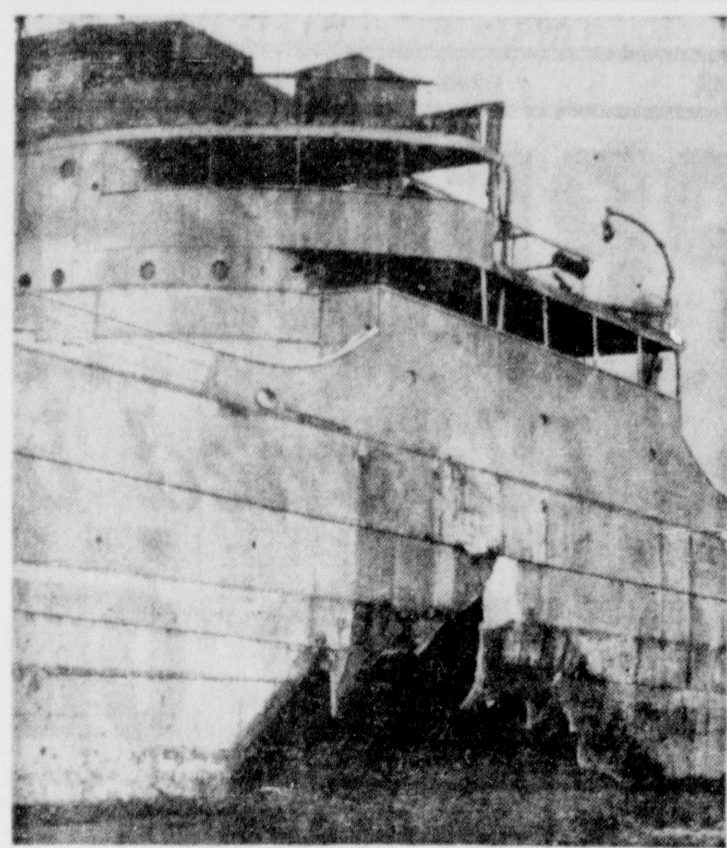

The British were forced to withdraw northward and fight off Japanese encirclements.

May Advance on India
With the ports of Rangoon and Bassein now open to Japanese warships, it was considered likely that the next Japanese sea move might be directed against Akyab, port near the frontier of India, and the Chittagong coast of India.

(An authoritative source in London said that the loss of Rangoon left the Indian ocean open to the Japanese and that they could be expected "to attack our trade and transport and may extend their activities as far as Ceylon.")

Military circles here, dependent on motor couriers for all reports from south Burma, said the exact situation there was uncertain and changing hourly.

Jesse Essary, 60, Dies in Office

Well Known Correspondent for Sunpapers III for Month

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—Jesse Frederick Essary, 60, correspondent for the Baltimore Sun, and former president of the National Press Club, died in his office today from heart disease.

Essary had been a Washington representative of The Sun since 1912. He also represented the paper in London.

Previously Essary had served as Washington correspondent for The Baltimore News, New Orleans Item and Boston Journal.

His widow, Helen Forman Kercher Essary, survives.

Essary was chief of the Sun's Washington Bureau for more than thirty years, retiring as chief last November because of ill health but continuing as correspondent.

Experienced Correspondent
He began to cover Washington while William Howard Taft was president, and he was versed in the development of the presidential press conference.

His foreign assignments included the Versailles peace conference for The Sun and a year as the paper's London correspondent. For many years he broadcast accounts of U. S. supreme court decisions over the National Broadcasting Company network.

Won $1,000 Prize
He wrote many books during his long career and collaborated on others. In 1932, his account of the deliberations of the Wickersham commission on Prohibition won him the $1,000 Pugsley prize for reportorial work in Washington.

A native of Washburn, Tenn., he received his early education in that state and studied at the Emory and Henry College in Emory, Va. He held honorary degrees from that school and from Georgetown University.

He served as a time as secretary to the commissioner of agriculture of Tennessee. He broke into the newspaper field on the Norfolk (Va.) Public Ledger.

groups," he believed anti-strike legislation should be passed at once.

No Strikes, Guffey Says
His remarks followed those of Senator Guffey (D-Pa.), who said he had been informed by the War Department and the War Production Board that "not a single man is on strike in any plant in the country whose production is important or essential to the war effort."

In the House, Rep. Gibson (D-Ga.) disclosed in an interview that he had prepared legislation to amend the National Labor Relations Act to require unions to submit annual financial statements to their members. The legislation, which he said was prepared at the request of the railroad yardmasters of the railroad yardmasters of America, would also make inter-union strikes illegal, require a sixty-day "cooling-off" period before a strike could become effective, permit voluntary joining or forming of organizations, and prohibit use of union funds for political purposes.

The Vinson measure would require the labor and business groups to register annually with the secretary of commerce, and to file a list of their officers and details of their liabilities and assets.

Vinson said the measure was drafted following an investigation by his committee into naval contracts. A majority report said the investigation had disclosed a "vast concentration of wealth" in the hands of labor organization.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 11 (AP)—A five weeks' spell of continuous hiccoughing is apparently at an end for Miss Maybelle Scott, 39.

Physicians at the Warner hospital said her attacks weakened and then ceased late last night. She had hiccoughed with clock-like regularity every thirty seconds since early in February.

Britain Gives Up White Bread for Duration of War

Step Necessary To Conserve Shipping Space, Woolton Says

LONDON, March 11 (AP)—Britain, gave up one of the mainstays of its meals—white bread—tonight with the jest that a dark loaf is better than none at all.

Lord Woolton, food minister, told the House of Lords that Britain's war need for shipping space necessitated extensive substitution of a national whole meal for white flour.

Woolton declared that the move did not indicate that stocks were running low. On the contrary, he said, the whole wheat will be used to get the fullest benefit from a large supply on hand.

The full effects of the new order will not be felt until April 20 when neither bakers nor manufacturers will be permitted to make anything of all white flour, or use more than twenty-five per cent of white flour in any products.

While the retailer has his present supply of white flour, housewives may buy it.

In another phase of the trend toward greater self-denial in living standards, consumers have been required recently to give up more food coupons for canned goods, chiefly from the United States.

At the same time the screws were tightened further on black market operations.

Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, told the House of Commons that the maximum term of imprisonment for black market operations had been raised to four years. In addition those convicted can be fined as much or more than they profited by the illegal transactions.

Japanese and Chinese In Severe Battle
CHUNGKING, March 11 (AP)—Severe fighting in which both Chinese and Japanese troops have suffered heavy losses has been going on since March 1 in southwestern Shantung province, one of the Chinese-held positions closest to Japan, a high command communiqué said tonight.

The war bulletin said the fight began with an attack by 30,000 Japanese troops against the towns of Tsaoheien, Hotse and Tingtao near the Honan province border.

The Japanese were said to be moving up reinforcements from Kaifeng, Japanese occupied capital of Honan province, and Tsinan, capital of Shantung.

The Japanese were believed to be attempting to remove a Chinese threat to the Lungtai and Tientsin-Pukow railways.

Philippine Front Reported Quiet
WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—The War Department reported today there had been no activity in the Philippines and that the positions of the American and Japanese forces on the Bataan peninsula had apparently become "temporarily stabilized."

It was the third successive day of inaction on the peninsula where the American forces commanded by General Douglas MacArthur face numerically superior Japanese units. A brief war department communiqué added that there "was nothing to report from other areas."

heavy smoke screen towards the Norwegian coast.

"Our surface forces did not succeed in making contact with the enemy, but any attempt to attack our convoy was frustrated."

"Two of our aircraft did not return from the attack on the Tirpitz."

Tirpitz Takes Flight
Whether the Tirpitz was damaged was not made clear, but if not, her ignominious retirement indicated either the presence of superior forces or a notable respect for the naval torpedo planes which played the major role in bringing to bay and sinking her sister ship, the Bismarck, last May 26.

Undoubtedly the British planes came from an aircraft carrier since the distance from Britain would be difficult for land-based craft.

Informed British sources said the fight probably was the same action mentioned in a German communiqué yesterday, which reported Nazi naval forces sank a Soviet merchantman and shot down three British planes off Bear Island, between Spitzbergen and Northern Norway.

The Germans might well have falsified the location, since Bear Island is more than 800 miles north of Trondheim and out of the way of normal sea lanes from Britain to Northern Russia.

The admiralty did not say whether the British surface forces included major units, but unofficial sources said, "We certainly would not be sending along any little ships to swap punches with the Tirpitz."

Tirpitz Not Alone
(The Germans, on the other hand, are unlikely to have sent the Tirpitz out alone, and at least three other important Nazi ships have been reported at Trondheim.)

The British implied that they now knew the whereabouts of the Tirpitz, which has been a mystery ship, often reported and never positively located almost from the moment she slid down the Wilhelmshaven ways with Adolf Hitler's personal blessing on April 1, 1939.

The battleship named for the late Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz was rumored to have been with the Bismarck when that ship sank the British battle cruiser Hood last May and was in turn sunk.

On Feb. 21, Stockholm dispatches reported the Tirpitz, the cruiser Admiral Hipper, and the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer were seen steaming along the Norwegian coast.

Roundabout dispatches from Germany said the ships were on guard against a possible American-British invasion of Norway.

British sources said the Tirpitz would be more difficult to destroy than was the Bismarck because land-based planes could portect her. It was considered possible that this factor prevented the ship-based British aviation from following the Tirpitz into port. The Tirpitz carries at least four planes of her own.

The Tirpitz is listed in Jane's fighting ships as a 35,000-ton ship, but the victors over the Bismarck said this twin displaced at least 50,000 tons, carried an unusually large crew of 2,400 men, and had exceptional armor—all attributes which the Tirpitz is presumed to duplicate.

Mediation Refused
Last month the War Labor Board, in its "first compulsory arbitration order," directed the railroad to arbitrate. George P. McNear, president of the T. P. & W., declined to comply.

The National Railway Mediation Board sent mediator John F. Murray to Peoria last week to arrange for arbitration, but none of the railroad executives attended the conference.

The Brotherhood members struck in protest against changes in rules and working conditions. They contended that their earnings would be reduced and that seniority no longer would be recognized as the sole basis for assigning jobs. The company maintained that the workers' incomes would be increased and calculated the scale on a straight time, eight hour day basis would be $56 for engineers, $38 for conductors, $7.40 for firemen and $7 for brakemen.

Much Idle Space In Automobile Shops
ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 11 (AP)—Governor O'Connor was told today that a large supply of machinery, skilled mechanics and manufacturing space is lying idle in Maryland's 490 automobile dealer shops.

The report of a nationwide survey of dealer establishments was sent to O'Connor by Joseph W. Frazer, president of Willys-Overland Motors.

On the basis of the survey, the report estimated that an arms factory of 4,200,000 square feet and employing 12,650 skilled mechanics could be harnessed to the war effort if all the machinery existing among dealers in this state were pooled.

The factory, it was estimated, could be equipped with 240 lathes, 560 grinding machines, 20 shapers, 150 electric drills and other equipment.

Results of the Maryland survey were included in the national report sent to the War Production Board.

Blum Asserts He Is Faithful to French Republic

Socialist Leader Blames Germany, not Frenchmen, for War

RIOM, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE, March 11. (AP)—Leon Blum in a spellbinding closing peroration told the Riom court and representatives of the American republics today that he considered the French people still faithful to the republic and declared that he personally was ready to collaborate with the Communists to fight for it.

Blum, Socialist leader who headed France's popular front government, concluded his defense after two days of questioning in the war guilt trial with the words:

Faith Still Exists
"We respected those who had faith in us. That faith is not worn out. It still exists. It will bear fruit in a future day in which we place all our hope."

"This trial, directed against the republic, will itself hasten its coming."

The Axis, he said, was responsible for the war, and not the defendant French leaders.

Sitting in the diplomatic tribune were S. Pinkney Tuck, counselor of the United States embassy, Brazilian minister De Melo and the Argentine military attaché, Col. Quiroga.

In regard to his leniency toward communists, Blum said that his coalition with them was induced by a threat to Republican institutions, but that nevertheless he agreed to it only after Pierre Laval had signed a pact with Joseph Stalin, who abandoned "revolutionary defeatism" as it concerned France and after French Communists stopped advocating autonomy for Alsace-Lorraine.

Not Forgetting Russia
"I was convinced and still am convinced," he said, "that it was impossible to defend Republican institutions in France while excluding the mass of workers and skilled workers—including those following the Communists."

Then Blum said he was "not forgetting" Russia's present fight and added, "nor am I forgetting that in the occupied zone the Communist party furnishes a great proportion of the hostages."

Disclosure of Stimson's presence here was permitted today, a day after his arrival by plane under escort of a dozen fighters.

The secretary, with Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commander-in-chief of the Caribbean area, and high-ranking officers, began a tour yesterday afternoon and continued it today by plane, automobile and boat.

Harvey Bundy, assistant secretary of war for air, and Col. E. J. Harrison, aide to Stimson, were in the group from the United States.

Annapolis Chickens All Out for Victory

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 11 (AP)—Annapolis chickens—the feathered type—definitely are victory-minded.

Several weeks ago, an Annapolis hen laid an egg with a "V" clearly embossed on the shell.

Carving a chicken in his restaurant today, Thomas Christo was amazed to find a "V" on the bird's breastbone.

A World war veteran, Cristo claims to have stripped thousands of chicken bones but said this was the first of its kind he'd ever seen.

Farm Bloc Plan Becomes Tangled Up in the House

Vote on Proposal to Prevent Sale of Surplus Leaves Loophole

WASHINGTON, March 11. (AP)—The House approved today a Farm Bloc proposal designed to prevent the sale of government-held surplus crops below parity prices but some members questioned whether the action would accomplish the purpose in the face of administrative opposition.

Unlike the proposal advanced in the Senate for a flat prohibition against the government's sale of its holdings below parity, the House measure would, prevent the commodity Credit Corporation from using any of its funds for expenses connected with such sales.

By a non-record vote of 116 to 47, the House retained in the $695,000,000 Agriculture appropriations bill a clause for this purpose. The corporation's allotment was $3,513,498.

Way Out for Roosevelt
Some members contended that sub-parity sales could be carried on despite the restriction. Rep. Dirksen (R-Ill.) said that existing law permits transfer of departmental funds up to five per cent, and that the president had a "blank check" emergency fund which he could use for that purpose if he desired.

But Rep. Tarver (D-Ga.), chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture, argued that the clause would prove effective "unless evaded," and urged the House to send it along to the Senate where it might be rewritten to make it more effective.

There were certain exemptions. The House two days ago modified the clause to permit release of deteriorated corn and wheat below parity to feed livestock and make industrial alcohol, and of cotton in connection with the Agriculture department's "new uses" program.

(Parity for farmers would be a price for their products giving them purchasing power equivalent, in the case of most crops, to that which they received for the 1909-14 period.)

Plea from Farm Bloc
The vote was heralded by pleas from the Farm Bloc that the House give the agriculture producers a "decent living wage."

"Now is the time to show whether you are a friend of the farmer, or whether you are willing to render only lip service," cried Rep. O'Connor (D-Mont.). "Give them the parity which they have been promised."

Rep. Page (D-Tex.) saw the government surplus crops as a menace to the farmer's fight to obtain parity prices and declared there was a "deliberate attempt to drive the market below parity."

Rep. Wadsworth (R-NY) argued, however, against writing new laws granting any one group "special privileges," while Rep. Taber (R-NY) contended that much of the surplus grain could be used for food and alcohol and that it was wise to get rid of this "constant menace" to farmers' income at the present time.

Russians Capture Key Junction in Lake Ilmen Area

Also Destroy Many German Planes Seeking To Deliver Food

MOSCOW, March 11. (AP)—Red army troops were reported tonight to have captured a key junction in the Lake Ilmen area where Soviet fighter pilots have steadily destroyed big Nazi transport planes trying to ferry reinforcements to the trapped Sixteenth German army under General von Busch.

Dispatches from the Staraya Russa sector said the Germans were using a transport route from Klenzig in Eastern Germany via Riga, Latvia, in an effort to shuttle the plane-loads of thirty to thirty-five men to the encircled garrison.

Forests and airdromes along the last leg of this service were littered with the burned-out wrecks of these big planes, the Russians said.

Many Commit Suicide
Tass also reported that the number of suicides of privates and officers alike in the besieged army were increasing, and that General von Busch had issued orders that bodies of these men be buried outside military plots and without honors.

Prisoners captured from some of the transport planes forced down enroute to Staraya Russa were quoted as saying they were enroute with food, munitions and clothing as well as additional manpower.

Twenty-five such transports were smashed in three days.

The regular midnight communiqué said the Soviet advance was continuing with the Germans suffering heavy losses, and stressed the increased air activity on both sides.

The Soviets had a 19-to-5 advantage in plane losses yesterday, the communiqué said, and on Sunday the Red air force was credited with knocking down eighty-three German planes, thirty-nine of them three-engined Junkers transports.

German Losses Heavy
The army newspaper Red Star announced earlier that 703 German and Russian planes were destroyed in the two weeks between Feb. 26 and March 6.

German losses were almost five to one for the Russians. The newspaper said the Nazis lost 576 planes, the Russians 127.

German air activity aimed at trying to wear out the Soviet air force by spring began a month ago. But the Red Star said, Russian raids on German airdromes have proven the most effective method of dealing with the German offensive.

Within the last two weeks the Red air force has begun a series of airdrome raids which netted special destruction of Junkers 88s (dive bombers) and Messerschmitt 110s (fighters).

More Italian Macchi fighters now are appearing on the southern front. The Russians say the use of these inferior aircraft illustrates how the German air force is weakening.

The Four-Year Plan Is Worth a Trial

VOTERS of Cumberland will be called upon at the biennial city election Tuesday to give their decision on an important change in the form of their local government, involving the terms, salaries and duties of the mayor and the city commissioners.

The proposal thus to be decided under authorization of a special act of the General Assembly, is known as the Four-Year plan. By terms of the act, the terms of the mayor and councilmen would be lengthened from two to four years each; and the compensation of the mayor would be increased from $1,500 to $2,000 annually and of the commissioners from $1,200 to $1,500 each. The four-year term would also apply to all office holders appointed by the council.

In addition, the act provides that the mayor and the councilmen shall each "devote at least four hours a day, except on Sundays and legal holidays, to the duties of their office and the affairs of the city." Under the present charter, the mayor is required to devote at least six hours a day to the office, but there is no time requirement for the commissioners.

Also, elimination of the property qualification long in effect is provided. At present the mayor is required to be a bona fide owner of property to the value of not less than $1,000 and assessed for it on the tax books of the city at the time of his election and for two years previously. Commissioners are required to own at least $500 of property under similar conditions.

Special elections to fill vacancies are also entirely eliminated by the act, provision being made that such vacancies be filled by appointment of the council. At present, council may not fill vacancies if the next election is more than a year off.

These proposed changes have long been given serious study by leading citizens and groups, and their inclusion in the authorization act represents altogether a general belief that they would prove of advantage in the operation of the city government. One or two provisions may not be to the liking of some citizens, and thus be in the controversial stage, but the advantages of the chief changes, which appear to have general endorsement, seem to this newspaper to outweigh those minor objections. Thus, the measure as a whole seems to be well worth a trial. If it proves unsatisfactory in the light of experience, it can always be changed.

There can be no sound opposition to the salary increases on the score of economy for the simple reason that the cost is offset by the elimination of the expense of one city election every second year. So far as the term lengthening is concerned, the only objection made is based on the apprehension that it would be too long for incompetent officials. One answer to that is that an increased responsibility is here placed upon voters to see that competent men are placed into office, and that would seem to be desirable. Another answer is that, on the one hand, the longer term would give the office holder greater opportunity to familiarize himself with his duties, thus making him more valuable as time goes on, while, on the other hand, the time, expense and burden of an extra re-election campaign would be lifted from his shoulders, which would redound to the welfare of the city in respect to service given.

The plan to have the councilmen devote more of their time to their jobs, even though the time required of the mayor is somewhat shortened, would appear to be of benefit to the city. As far as the mayor is concerned, the chances are that he will be giving more of his time than is specified to the office. At any rate, those who have held this office can probably testify that the responsibilities of the office will so require them. It might have been as well to continue the mayor's time requirement as it has been; but this is a minor consideration as compared with the other changes.

Perhaps the most controversial of the changes is that eliminating the property qualifications of the mayor and the councilmen. There are those who believe that a man who has not amassed the sums now specified in the qualifications, as one Protestant has declared, is "totally unfit to run a city which does a business of over a million dollars a year." On the other hand there are those who believe that a man's worth as a public servant is not to be measured by his purse, that, as one proponent has declared, "voting for public officials is not a matter of what a man has" but "what that man can do and what his demonstrated capacity for the position is." In other words, character and ability rather than material means should be the chief deciding factor. Here again we can see the added responsibility placed upon the public to see that only worthy officials are elected.

So far as the News can observe, there seems to be preponderate opinion favoring the elimination of the property qualification.

All in all, the Four-Year plan, despite some of the objections to it, appears to be well worth a trial. It should serve to promote the orderly conduct of city government, further eliminate political bickerings, make for economy and promote efficiency in administration. If it does not work out that way, it can be changed again; but in the meantime we shall have gained the benefit of both doubts and expectations.

More Steps in the Right Direction

AS GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON has observed, President Roosevelt's long-needed move in streamlining the organization of the army is another long-needed move in the direction of a more efficient prosecution of the war.

The president's order groups military functions into three basic units: ground forces, air forces and the service of supply, each under a commanding general and all under the chief of staff, Gen. George C. Marshall.

By grouping such branches as infantry, cavalry, field artillery and coast artillery in one unit, the order has the effect of abolishing a number of time-honored bureaus which had long ago outlived their usefulness. It also gives new recognition to the importance of the air force. Furthermore, it clears the way for the projected expansion of the army to 4,000,000 or more officers and men.

The president's order was issued after weeks of study by administration and military authorities. Streamlining the organization of the army now parallels the streamlining of the war production machinery with Donald Nelson as the boss.

These two steps were important, but, as the News has heretofore observed in commending the president's reorganization and consolidation of federal housing agencies, they should be extended. There are many other divisions of the government set-up to which streamlining methods should be applied. There are too many deadheads on the government payroll. There is still an appalling amount of duplication and overlapping in governmental functions. There is still no effective government policy for dealing with labor elements which shirk their obligations toward maximum war production.

If the president and his administrative assistants will now turn their attention to the solution of problems such as these, this country may at last get its war effort into high gear.

The Importance Of the Will

PERHAPS a good case could be made for the fact that whenever a wealthy nation grows too neglectful of discipline, another nation, desirous of extending its realm, will seek to acquire the lands of the so-called easy-going race. That is an ever-present peril for residents of countries possessing large resources.

But wherein lies the cause of such events in the rich countries? The word discipline often is used nowadays when nothing more than the old-fashioned term of employing the will is concerned. It has been said frequently that educators in this country paid too much attention to the training of the mind in proportion to the effort that they expended to train the wills of their students. It should have been obvious that mere training of the mind will not of itself develop character.

Somewhere in modern education rests the source of this error. If it were recognized, perhaps the problem of "discipline" would diminish. For all its many evils, this war has brought one contribution—it has made men recognize anew the importance of the will.

You've Heard about Dignity

By MARSHALL MASLIN

What is this Dignity you hear some people talk so much about?

Is it gray hairs? Is it experience? Is it slow and measured tread? Is it a sonorous and deliberate voice? Is it wealth and position?

I wish I knew because all my life I've been hearing about Dignity and I've never been able to find it in the places where it is supposed to be. . . I've heard men say, "I can't do that—my dignity will not allow it." Meaning, for instance, "I can't enjoy myself in that way because people would laugh at me if they heard about it. I can't eat an apple in public. I can't get down on the floor and play tiddly-winks. I can't admit anyone in my family ever worked with their hands. My dignity won't let me!"

There was George Meredith, a great English novelist and poet. He was ashamed of the fact that his father was a tailor, and he tried to conceal it all his long life. And that fear that people would know his father was a tailor made him live a futile existence in that one respect. . . Poor George Meredith, he knew little really of dignity. . . Even so great a man as Ralph Waldo Emerson once said: "I do not wish to be amused." As though being amused were any crime, unworthy of a man! Serious was Emerson in so many ways that he must have missed a crowd of good things that make life worth while.

I have seen dignity in small children who will not yowl when they are hurt. I have seen it in a fine old tree, brooding in the long shadows at the end of a day. I have seen it in puppies, in horses, in kinds of people who did know they had dignity.

And I'm inclined to believe that dignity is something you never know you have. If you think about your dignity, if you talk about it, if you consult your dignity in a time of bewilderment, it vanishes. It is real, it is even good, until you mention it—and then it becomes a puff-ball or one of those sloughed-off snakeskins you find in the fields.

That's all I know about this thing called dignity—except that it is a great treasure of which you must not boast. Perhaps you know more!

Industry Groups Long a Necessity, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, March 11—Mr. Nelson's W. P. B. has announced the formation of the twenty-four "committees on industry."

Over and over for the past four years this column has urged that our industries cannot be mobilized within themselves to act as a single unit responsive to the government's requirements, unless leading representatives of each industry be formed into separate industry committees.

These committees act as points of contact and all inclusive information between the government war-making agencies and the industries. Only in this way can all operate as parts of a single machine to pool patents, trade secrets and resources, to guide production through the most fruitful channels and to see that every ounce of resources and facilities are put to their maximum uses.

Stressed by Baruch

Over and over again, for a much longer period than four years, Mr. B. M. Baruch, who is the best articulate voice of actual experience on this subject, has placed the immediate formation of these committees as necessary step No. 1 in industrial mobilization.

Did it do any good? Oh no. He was listened to with much wordy approval by the amateurs who were doing his old job, but, except in a half-hearted way, little was done and what was attempted was carried out with so little understanding and sympathy by the government that it might as well have been omitted altogether.

Something worse than nothing was done. At every pitiful inadequate effort the department of Justice let out a warning growl that such co-operation by industries, even at the instance of government, and no matter how much the public interest and security of the nation might be involved, would be a "conspiracy in restraint of trade" and would be prosecuted in the federal courts as a crime.

It is a little hard to see how a necessary combination of facilities, in which the government of the United States is the guiding and leading party, could be a "conspiracy" against the laws of the United States. But such has been the attitude of the department of Justice and such it still is.

Done in Part

Nevertheless, Mr. Nelson has apparently done the deed in part, and very late. I don't know what magic was used to calm the fears of industrialists. One could think it was a nod from the boss, if, on the very eve of the action, the attorney general had not risen on his hind legs and insisted to a group of prominent new dealers that the New Deal is a political party whose policies must continue—war or no war.

Surely, in the eyes of extreme new dealers, that is true. It is a party of special groups, attracted to a central standard by hand-outs from the public treasure and otherwise, to bring under one roof the combined voting-power of organized labor, most of agriculture and all the "have-nots" against all the haves.

As long as the pap holds out, that is enough to elect any person and party continuously. This new party, as one guest who heard the attorney general's speech said, "is more dynamic than Fascism and more revolutionary than Communism."

Pap Runs Out

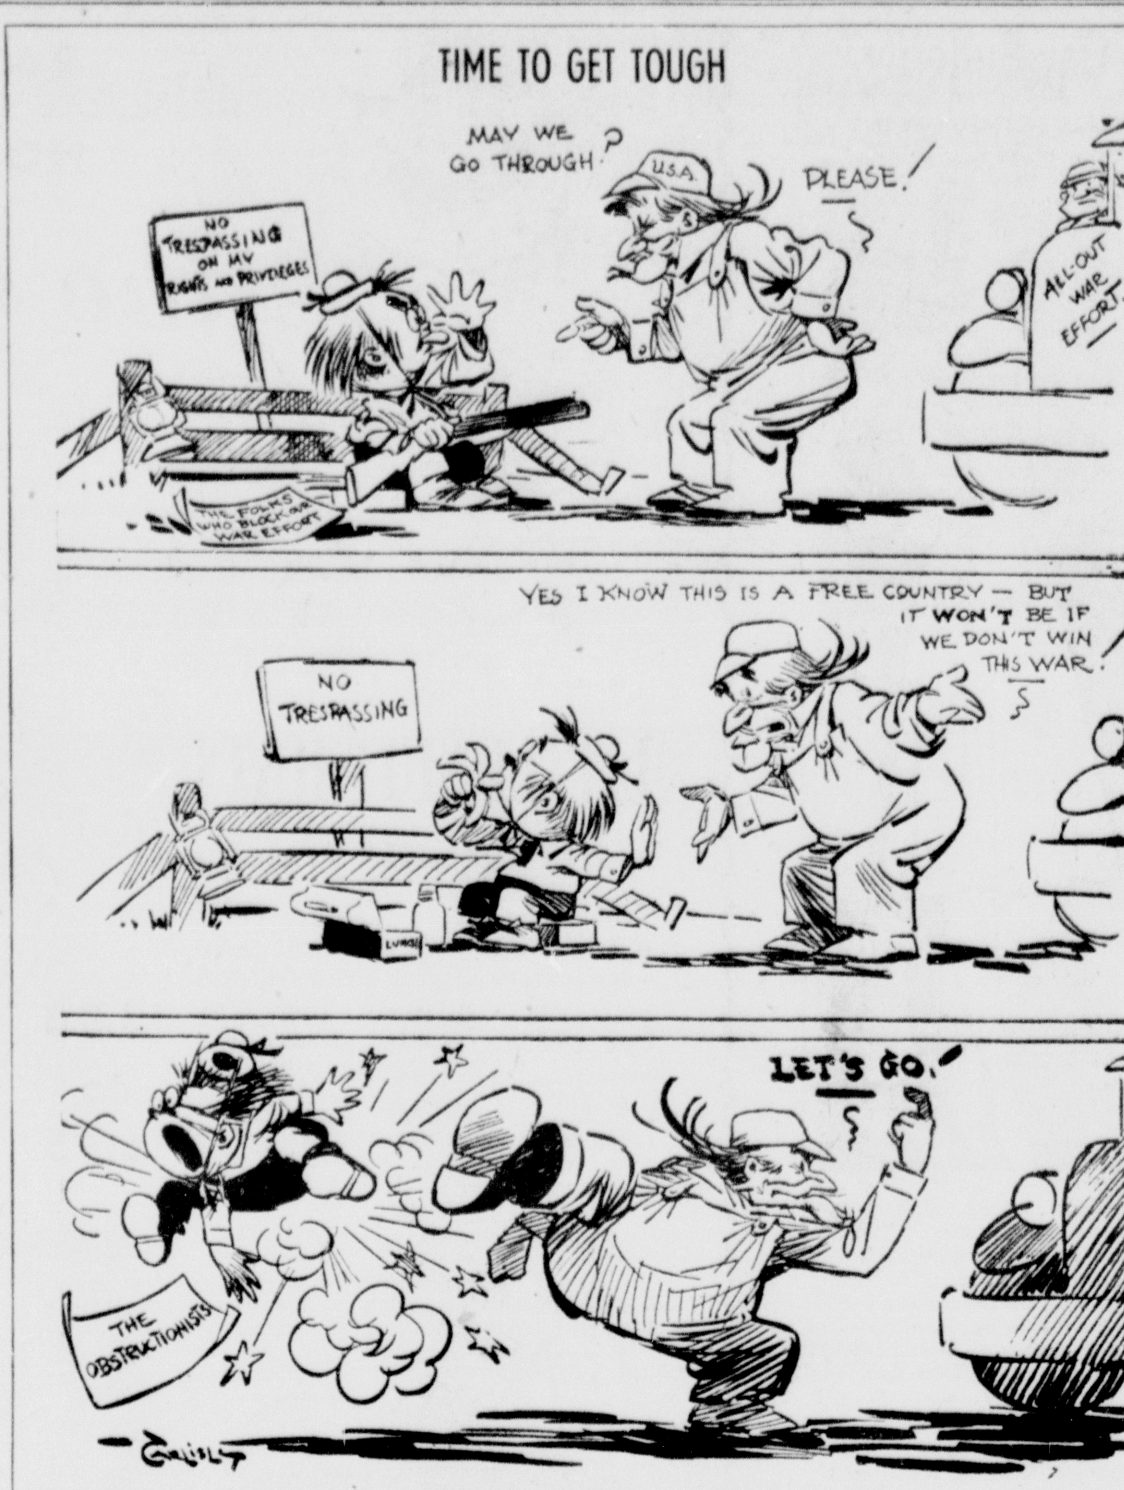

Yes, it is heap big medicine to build a winning party as long as the pap holds out. But that cannot be forever. We are in a war and most of the pap is already either spent or committed. Also, because we are in a war, we need unity and the full organization and co-operation of all groups—both the haves and the have-nots—both industry and labor—and we don't need a new political fight over the

Rear Adm. F. J. Horne

Under the new, unified Navy reorganization, Rear Admiral Frederick Joseph Horne, former commander of the aircraft squadrons, scouting fleet, will administer the duties of chief of naval operations in the office of Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet. Admiral Stark was relieved of the operations post and assigned to London.

Crisis Confronts Nation, Sullivan Says, Which Embodies Turning Point in War

By MARK SULLIVAN

New Deal. It is in the saddle for the duration no matter what happens.

The action of the department of Justice in threatening to punish the necessary complete mobilization of industry, and of the attorney general in bespeaking a new deal—flinging contest for the coming congressional elections, are just about the worst and most ill-timed things that could happen to crown our unrelieved succession of blunders since the day we declared war.

Mark Sullivan

It is so unexpected as to be, to many of our people, incredible. Who, as recently as last December first, would have believed that by mid-March Japan would have come as far in our direction as Australia, that stopping her at Australia would depend upon American forces, that it would not be certain we could keep her out of Australia, and that if she succeeded in taking or dominating Australia, we would be, in effect, in the position of fighting to defend our continental shore.

Japan is within 300 to 400 miles of Australia—a two-hour flight for her bombing planes, a one-day trip for her naval vessels. While not yet securely based off the Australian shore, she soon will be, unless driven back within the next few weeks. This does not seem probable Japan can only be dislodged from her present holdings by the United States. And it seems doubtful whether we yet have sufficient force in those waters to do that.

Australia Likely Objective

The question is now asked, will Japan try to take or dominate Australia, or follow some other course? The other course would be to entrench herself where she now is, and concentrate her fighting in the other direction, toward India. The answer to this question is known definitely in only one place, in the minds of the Japanese strategists at Tokyo. All that anyone else can do is to argue from reason. And reason says clearly that Japan will try desperately to take Australia, or as much of it as she needs for military purposes; or at the least try to prevent us from establishing a base in Australia.

Is Japan likely to remain where she now is, and give the United States time to build up an enormous force in Australia, a force which in time would be sufficient to take the offensive against Japan? Or is Japan more likely to drive into Australia while we are still comparatively weak there, try to take Australia or as much of it as she needs for the time being, then consolidate herself there? By this course, if successful, Japan would eliminate us from the Far East, would compel us to fall back to a base at Hawaii, some five thousand miles nearer to our home shore.

On U. S. Shoulders

What seems immediately ahead is a battle for Australia. Against Japan almost the whole dependence will be the United States. Australia, with a population of only some 7,000,000, can contribute little of the Dutch who defended the East Indies, little can be left. Great Britain can help hardly at all, for, with Singapore gone, she has no naval base in the Far East. In effect, the battle for Australia will be between Japan and the United States.

For weeks we have been sending great forces to Australia. But the force we have delivered there up to date has not been enough. This is proved by our inability to save any of the East Indies. Yet correspondents on the scene report that what we lacked of enough was very little—in some of the battles in the East Indies, the judgment of correspondents is that had we arrived a few hours earlier Japan would have been stood off.

Building up a great American force in Australia is difficult, and from now on will be harder. The journey is long, from San Francisco about seven thousand miles. In the latter part of the journey, our naval and cargo ships are subject to attack by Japanese submarines and planes. From now on, with Japan in possession of all the East Indies, every day that enables her to increase her force there, will increase her capacity to harass American ships going to Australia.

Choice of Courses

If and when we establish ourselves in Australia in sufficient force, we will have a choice of courses. We may try to drive Japan gradually backward out of the East Indies islands that she has successively seized; we may try to engage the Japanese navy in battle, we may after getting a foothold in some islands farther toward Japan, attack the cities of Japan's home islands.

Alternative courses in other areas are sometimes proposed. It is suggested that, while holding Australia, we should make our attack upon Japan by way of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. An objection to this is that the Aleutian Islands do not provide desirable bases, they lack anchorage and other facilities for a fleet.

Another suggestion is that we persuade Russia to grant us air bases near Vladivostok, and from there bomb Japan's home cities. That would be feasible and desirable. The obstacle is that Russia is not likely to grant us the air bases. It may be taken as a fixed policy of Russia that she will not, in the near future, either grant us air bases nor take any other step that might involve her in war with Japan. Russia will not do this until after she has driven every German off her soil.

For this, Russia is not to be reproached. We can see Russia's position by applying it to ourselves. If the Japanese had landed on our Pacific Coast and occupied our territory as far east as Denver, our public opinion would insist upon driving the Japanese off our soil before we diverted any force to fight Hitler in Europe.

Unique Strike Reason

Another unique reason for a war-time strike in a defense industry has been reported to a government department. AFL workers at an Ohio bronze factory called a strike because the parking lot provided for them was muddy. Several loads of cinders were brought in to make the workers return to the shop apartments where they were making under a navy contract.

Auto Head Satisfied

Whether this, plus Nelson's speech explaining his purpose will be enough to dispel management suspicions is the only remaining question. Everyone has confidence in Nelson personally. An auto manufacturer (not in the big three) came in to ask him what he was up to in his labor-management committee scheme. The auto man said that board of directors if necessary, he would win the war, but that he already had a joint harmony committee. Nelson told him W.P.B. would be satisfied with any arrangement which enabled it to get ideas from about workers about expanding production. He went away satisfied.

Near-Sighted Tendency

Some government officials (Mr. Nelson) are developing a nearsighted and dangerous tendency to attribute to any reporter who publishes criticism, the personal instigation of that criticism. It seems to make them happier to believe the criticism is the work of a personal instigator than to believe the criticism is the work of a newspaperman who in this instance again was only an agent for expressing business sentiment which would have injured success of the drive.

Only justification for reporting objections to government policy in this war is to iron out differences and establish unity, confidence and efficiency. A constructive ball game to have been started rolling in the labor-management committee instance as in many another. So really does not matter how many officials get, as long as constructive corrections can be achieved.

400 Enemy Subs

Suspicious Nazi traffic has been noted around the Cape Verde Islands, off Africa, and the story is going round that the Axis is using them as refueling bases for their subs attacking our coast.

Every previous search for refueling bases in the Caribbean or for mother ships, has proved futile. It is still doubted that the subs need close refueling bases, although they may be picking up torpedoes and ammunition somewhere outside Axis waters.

Germany is reported to have nearly 300 submarines, some still building. Italy around eighty. The Vichy French had fifty-nine built and twenty-two building and the Nazis have no doubt stolen the twenty-two building, if not some of the built. So it looks like we are faced with a possible Atlantic fleet of about 400 enemy boats—enough to challenge any patrol for a long time.

Second Story Crowded

The Army reorganization sweep high, as promised. But so many of officers have been swept upstairs that the second story is getting a little crowded. The army high command shows a disposition to save the personal feelings of officers by avoiding the process of retirement. This is natural, but soon they may have to start dropping them off the roof into private life. Even the attic is getting filled now.

Mine Priorities Modified

WPB announced one day the banning of gold and silver mined from priorities for machinery for repair and maintenance (under preference rating order No. 56). Apparently they were not considered essential. Next day it announced it did not mean they would be cut off. It was then ordered that only mine whose production consists of gold and silver to more than thirty percent of total dollar volume (hence not lead, zinc and copper) would suffer. But even these would get an A-10 rating.

Insiders attribute the major alteration to Republican Governor Carr, of Colorado, who burned the wires to Washington with accounts of what a complete denial of priorities would do to his region economically.

THE DAILY STORY

SOME DON'T

Peg Was Known as a Slowpoke, As Far As Boys Were Concerned. The Story of the Tortoise and Hare Revised

(Copyright by United Feature Syndicate)

By VIRGINIA OWEN

I had known Peg for years before she ever went to college. I had known her in eighth grade when I began to want to spread lipstick all over my face and to treat the boys in my class with utter scorn.

Even way back there in the Dark Ages, Peg had been the kind whose hands never got dirty even when she played in the mud and whose mind never took a furlough.

I think back and realize that she was a lot smarter than we gave her credit for. She didn't do so bad, or at least she did well enough to stay in the know as far as the girls were concerned. She made most of the big dances even though her dates were with dull boys who could seldom dance.

When we graduated a lot of us went East to Fernwood College for Women. Fernwood is a small and sometimes not so much. She looked good on a campus, though—the kind of girl just stacked up for beige cashmere sweaters and short, pleated skirts. Her hair was longer and blonder and her eyes bluer. I could never figure out why some girls have that certain socko and other girls don't. You can notice those things in a girl's school.

In our third year I roomed right next to Peg Redmond in Powell Hall and we got to know each other better than ever before. Sometimes I would get provoked because I liked her so well and would start screaming at her for not doing some gunning of her own. "Relax, Sugar," she would say, "you know I just haven't got it." But I didn't know. Her smile looked strictly McCoy. "Maybe," I thought to myself, "she is just waiting for the blue ribbon special."

Last fall we all came back as seniors. It was wonderful. There were football games and bonfires and all the traditional horse-play that makes college the best place in the world. I was in my glory. By my sophomore year at Fernwood I had crashed the sacred gates of Tynan Military. By my senior year I had really arrived. Peg still lived in the same hall with me and together we hashed all the current events on campus and catalogued the possibilities across the river. That's what started everything.

I was dating an overgrown pickskin player with a surprising amount of brains and chatter for his profession. I was happy. Things were riding high. Then, one night my tall friend brought along a short friend. Not so tall but very, very on the ball. His name was Justin Lund and he was strictly there all the time. He was shortish and slight and he had dark hair and very dark eyes. He wore a light green brushed wool sweater and he had a clean, tweedy air about him.

He was sharp. Maybe just a little too sharp. I wasn't sure. What was more, he didn't have a date. So Peg was it.

Even weeks later I couldn't believe that Redmond was in love. But she was and it was my fault. Oh, I was glad in a way. She was happier than she had ever been and being in love even made her look different. You know, stars in the eyes etc.

Then every once in a while Peg would go out alone and come back looking very solemn for a girl who had picked off the most eligible man in the vicinity. Then, I knew, of course. It was just too good to last. When I questioned she said, "Oh, I guess it's just the weather."

So then last night was Tynan's spring prom and, of course, Justin was prom king and Peg was prom queen and I was the original pessimist. Peg had been sort of off the beam all day as though she were thinking of something very far away. I had a little sinking feeling in my stomach and by the time we reached the dance I felt like I had been riding on a fast elevator. There was something different in the whole set up. For the first time in my life I didn't quite get it.

So we've been out of school a month now and last week I got a letter from Peg. Talk about blue ribbon specials. What could be more romantic than being married to Justin Lund and announcing your engagement at the spring prom. Looks like I missed a few tricks. The prom king was sharper than I thought he was.

Many articles of merchandise previously imported by Brazil are now being produced locally, according to the department of Commerce.

You couldn't quite tell about that Chick.

the thought of the blond Davis in front of her (age 13) whose mother had taught him to dance and drive a car. We all liked Peg. She was shy and sweet and retiring and the girls in the crowd always rated her with kindness plus a light, but nauseating, dash of condescension.

Sometimes, though, I used to wonder if Peg was as scoreless as she seemed. You couldn't quite tell out that chick. Every once in a while when Peg would overlook a mark from one of the glamor girls of the high school crowd I would college with that nice ivy vine-and-sunshine attitude that only small colleges have. The scholastic average is respectable and the instructors are friendly and in-covered, always looking as though they were ordered by catalogue to fit the campus. Besides, Tynan Military lies just across the river. Maybe Peg hadn't considered that angle but the rest of us had given it ample time—ample time.

I saw a lot of Peg in my first three years at school. She was the same only thinner and prettier and neater, if possible. She dated some

A LEAKY radiator is often blissfully ignored. To have it repaired costs little. But repair on the ceiling below, damaged by dripping water, comes high.

Spend pennies to repair the leak. Save the dollars to buy DEFENSE SAVINGS BONDS. Every household budget—every salary check—should go in part for Defense Savings to help defeat the enemies of freedom.

LORENA CARLETON

SYNOPSIS

ANETTE WINSLOW, 17, beautiful, and aspiring to fame on the stage, meets LAURENCE PEYTON, top-ranking actor, and GUST DRAKE, Peyton's leading lady. Larry in turn introduces her to MISS LYNDON, and her brother, JIMMY.

YESTERDAY: Bradford, the producer, tells Verrazano that Anette is a "gigging clown."

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

NOTHING was said as Anette, Verrazano and the two producers moved toward the Blackstone hotel. Anette hoped she might be going to get out without further punishment. But when they were seated, Verrazano squinted his beetle brows in her direction and in a voice of thoughtful sarcasm, wanted to know how long have you been doing a turn at the State-Lake?

Instead of answering, the girl asked curiously, "What on earth are you doing there?"

"It was in the nature of a rehearsal. We used to spend entire afternoons in the vaudeville houses when we were kids. Music halls, those days, my child." He tapped her menu with his thumb. "Make up your mind. What do you want to eat?"

She realized she had been peering at the printed list without seeing a single item. "I don't want anything. I've had dinner."

"How is Larry, anyway?" Verrazano asked conversationally. "He's fine, but I didn't have dinner with Larry. I had dinner with Miss Lyndon. I ate mine. She drank hers."

The man inquired in a soft tone, "Isn't that a strange how-do-you-do?"

No. She drinks all the time." The teacher said, "You know what I mean?"

Anette paid no attention to him. She took off her little brown felt hat and rubbed her forehead. "My head aches," she said apologetically across the table to Verrazano's producer friends.

Bradford, giving his order to the waiter, said nothing. Seymour put his hand to his chin, and rubbed his jawline meditatively, while he stared at her. He said, in a tone that amounted to accusation, "You aren't wearing your hair that way in the pictures."

"Pictures?" Her frowning puzzlement turned into annoyance. Professor Verrazano, did you actually show those dreadful wedding pictures to your friends?"

He finished his most particular order. "And be sure there is garlic on both the salad and the steak." Then he turned to his pupil. "Yes, did. Purposely."

The producer Bradford was looking at her now. "You don't look like the same girl." "Thank heaven," she murmured. Bradford leaned on his elbows and brought his face closer to hers across the table. "Why do you say that?"

She met his eyes and found them so coldly gray and critical that she was completely disconcerted. "Why not?" she asked shortly. "It isn't exactly pleasant to have your hair snatched on your neck and look plain and ugly at your own wedding, especially when someone like August Drake—" There it came again, that choked feeling of hot anger. She picked up her glass of red water and sipped it, staring downward all the while. Because of that, she missed completely the interchanged glances of the three men.

Verrazano observed, "You're too warm, aren't you, dear? Better take off your coat." He reached toward her shoulders and helped her remove the luxurious wrap from her plain school-girl ensemble.

Making no allowance for her upset feelings, Bradford pursued the subject. "We've been hearing about you. From him." With his cigarette he gestured toward the dramatic coach. "About your appearance in the amateur show, how hard you work, how talented you are. Then we saw your pictures in the papers." A professional enthusiasm lit his voice. "They had something."

"Yes," agreed Seymour. "Qualities we liked. Qualities we were looking for."

Bradford said, "In your face there was an abundance of emotions—self-pity, happiness, jealousy, fright, timidity, a bit of anger. Everything was there in those not-at-all-flattering photographs."

Seymour took up again. "So, after that buildup, you surely can imagine our disappointment to see you totally idiotic, giggling and yelling from a theater box."

Anette felt as if she had been slapped. Her eyes, which had been fixed attentively on the two producers, changed from soft topaz to the sandy, rock-like tones they took on when she was unusually infuriated. She sank back in her chair and swallowed hard. In her disappointment and vexation she found herself blaming everyone. Verrazano for not having told her she was to be studied by his two friends, August and Larry, for having upset her in the first place. Even the man whose act she had disrupted—she blamed everyone in a blind, groping, helpless, heartbroken anger.

"I didn't know I was on display," she began in a quivering voice. Verrazano waited until the waiter placed seafood cocktails on the table, before asking, "Why else did you think you'd be alone in a box with a spotlight on you?"

The gaze she turned upon him was dewy and beseeching. "I mean I didn't know I was being displayed to Mr. Bradford and Mr. Seymour."

"Dismiss that angle for the moment. I want to know how you happened to be making such a spectacle of yourself." Not trusting her voice, Anette just shook her head negatively. But Verrazano refused to accept that for an answer. Having discovered that her eyelids were slightly puffy, he prodded deliberately, cruelly. "Come on, tell me. Speak up! Have you been struck dumb?" He jabbed a slim salted wafer into the sauce on the seafood. "I can't understand why you were not at the theater with Larry. That's where you belong."

"Larry doesn't think so—he didn't want me there." The girl managed to get the words said without faltering. But now the enormity of having been spurned seemed far more insulting when spoken aloud. Her eyes widened with a shamed horror and she glanced quickly about the table to see the effect of her statement on the three men.

They made no answers. They had stopped eating, however, and were sitting quietly. Waiting. Watching. And then it happened. She dropped her eyelids as shields against the tears rolling over her lower lashes, then as they swooped down her cheeks, wiped them away with the backs of both hands, simultanely, in gestures pathetic and childish. Down came the tears again. To Anette, the three men, watching her so painstakingly, seemed not to exist. Neither did other late diners, nor the curiously hovering waiter. Her grief seemed inviolable. Something belonging solely to her and not to be disturbed, not to be consoled. She found a handkerchief and stemmed the flowing eyes, but her face remained wet, shining and scrubbed looking. Framed above the excessively plain white collar, it was young, innocent, and gripping in its sadness.

In a voice, utterly bereft of hope and joy, she suddenly said, "Please excuse me for a few minutes," and left the table.

"Poor kid," Bradford stared after her, an unhappy expression creasing his face, then turned to Verrazano. "You are a dog, my friend, to goad her into that—but what an actress!" he exclaimed.

The dramatic teacher was cutting into rare steak. "Sure. But you wouldn't have known it if I hadn't beat it out of her. You'd still have been calling her a giggling clown."

Bradford turned to his partner, who was wearing a dreamy look as he picked at a Spanish omelette. "Well?" demanded Bradford.

Seymour said, "Yeah!" and continued eating happily. "She has as many facets to her personality as a rose-cut diamond," Verrazano praised.

"Yes," seconded Bradford. "And vigorously expressive hands." "I like the way she lets go, just not giving a cuss about anybody," Seymour said. "You can't help looking even if it does hurt you."

After 15 or 20 minutes the men paused between bites and complimentary sentences to wonder why Anette had not returned.

"I'll try to find her," Verrazano volunteered. He located her after a short search in a corner lobby chair, reading a comic magazine. When he stopped beside her and coughed loudly, she lifted her clear topaz eyes to his now suspicious face and asked, with a laugh, "Well, how did I go over?"

"You little devil!" But he had to answer her contagious smile. He pulled her by the hand from the chair and led her back toward the dining room. "There I thought you were eating out your heart over something."

She admitted, "I was unhappy over the way Larry and August treated me at the theater. But I had gotten over that when all three of you were so horrified over that fool escapade at the State-Lake that it stood to reason I was supposed to do the opposite. Anyway, why shouldn't I get the cue? You were all but sticking pins in me."

Back at the table, she met the producers' solicitous faces with the necessary gravity. They lost no time in coming to the point. "We have come to the conclusion that Verrazano was right about you," Seymour hastened to say.

Bradford spoke up. "We know you are right for Ninetta." Anette knew she could let delighted thrills soar through her voice now. She caroled, "But, Mr. Bradford, I thought you produced in New York." Swirling immediately, she said to Seymour, "I didn't know you produced in Chicago."

Bradford said, "We do." Seymour said, "We don't." Together they said: "We mean you'll have to go to New York."

Nazis May Attempt To Invade England, McNaughton Says

Declares No Effort Will Be Let Slip for Offensive Action by Allies

WASHINGTON, March 11 (AP)—Lieutenant General A. G. McNaughton, commander of Canada's army in Great Britain, says that there is a good prospect that Germany will attempt an invasion of England this spring.

"That is one of the most dangerous things that can happen to us and we have got to be on the alert to meet it," he told a press conference.

At the same time, the Canadian leader who has been conferring here with President Roosevelt and high American and British military officers, declared that "none of us think we can win the war by sitting on our heels."

Disclosing that the discussions had dwelt principally on offensive action, General McNaughton said that the two tasks confronting the Canadian expeditionary force were to help defend the British Isles and to keep its eyes open for "offensive" action.

He pointed out that it must be obvious, even to the Axis, that Canada was building up its forces for transportation to England as fast as ships were available to take them here. Shipping space, he said, was the only limiting factor.

Asked when an offensive seemed likely, the general replied it was not for him to say, but that no effort "will be let slip."

Those responsible for conducting the war must decide where to concentrate maximum forces, he said, and emphasized that they must resist the temptation to "dissipate forces" to guard against local raids.

General McNaughton said he could not disclose the exact number of Canadian troops in Europe, but did reveal that they composed three infantry divisions, one armored division, one army tank brigade, corps, line of communications, and base units.

"We have never lost our intention of training our forces for even 'un' attack in Europe," he declared.

Prosperity can change man's nature, and seldom is any one cautious enough to resist the effects of good fortune.

Bonus for Teachers Voted by Commissioners

UPPER MERIDEN, Md., March 11. (AP)—Prince Georges county teachers will receive a $200 bonus during the fiscal year beginning next month.

The bonus, approved by the county commissioners, will be paid in ten monthly installments of $20. William A. Carson, president of the board, said the bonus would not be official until the county budget was signed at the end of March but assured a delegation that the bonus would be forthcoming.

The school board sought payment of a $250 bonus to stem the mass resignations of teachers to take higher paying federal jobs. The county commissioners cut the bonus to $200.

The delegation, appearing before the commissioners, said the bonus would also recompense the teachers for extra work being done because of defense expansion.

And the Fish Must Jump into the Boat

CUMBERLAND, Md., (AP)—It isn't that the fishermen are lazy. They're just worried about their tires and gasoline.

Figuring that anglers won't be able to go far afield after the speckled ones this season, a group of fishermen asked a state commission to stock streams much nearer home with 7,000 trout.

Honesty is the best policy, but he who acts on that principle is not an honest man.

PORTRAIT OF THE AMERICAN POCKETBOOK... TODAY

Behold the picture of the American pocketbook today. Note the heavy burden and strain placed on it by many demands and rising prices. That strain, incidentally, is on every wage-earner's purse regardless of size of income. Yes, yours, too!

What can you do about it? Plenty!

Make your precious dollars count! Don't pay a single penny more than you need to. And you can help to keep prices down by patronizing stores which have pledged themselves to this patriotic objective.

What have we done to keep prices down? Listen...

Your Julian Goldman Store here and its branches throughout the country together with other leading retailers have joined in a national movement to keep prices down. Our margin of profit on every item of men's, women's and children's apparel has been cut to the bone. Instead of holding out for a large profit on few sales we prefer to make a small profit on many sales.

Why have we kept prices down?

We believe that it's not only patriotic—it's sound business, too. By keeping prices down we've made thousands of new friends and customers and increased our volume of sales tremendously. Keeping faith with our public has kept us thriving and busy.

Ease the strain on your pocketbook!

Save yourself precious dollars on your clothes, as thousands of other thrift-wise American families do, by buying your apparel needs at

Theft of Tires Held Most Heinous Crime

FAIRPLAY, Colo., (AP)—Two-gun highwaymen, who waylaid the stagecoach and its shipment of gold, once were the scourge of Park County in Colorado gold country. Not so in 1942.

"All of our things were left in Honolulu," she said here. "I'm hoping that some of them will be saved."

She has had requests from all parts of the country. Mrs. Kelly disclosed, for keepsakes—neckties, hats, handkerchiefs, anything—belonging to the pilot who sank a Jap battleship off the Philippines but paid for it with his life.

ANOTHER LIFE-TIME RESIDENT OF MARMET PRAISES WORLD'S TONIC

Young Local Housewife and Mother Says "My Skin Looks Clearer, the Dizzy Spells and Nervous Headaches Seem Over With"

Mrs. Nettie Wright, Curry Hol-low, has lived in Marmet, near Charleston, W. Va., all of her 23 years, to date. She says: "To me World's Tonic seemed like a blessing. I had suffered so because of constipation and the ailments which resulted from it that I felt tired, nervous and run down. Rheumatic-like kidney pains would come in my back, shoulders, joints and muscles that interfered with getting my housework done. Dizzy bilious spells brought spots flashing past my eyes and often were followed by sick headaches. Heartburn, bloating and belching would come after eating and gas caused severe stomach cramps as well as heart palpitation and shortness of breath.

MRS. NETTIE WRIGHT

"I'll always keep World's Tonic handy because of all the wonder-ful relief it brought me from con-stitution and the ailments which this condition brought about. The dizzy bilious spells are not coming on so and the sick nervous head-aches have been fully relieved. I'm not having such rheumatic-like kid-ney pains in my back, joints or

CHINESE STOICISM AT SINGAPORE

Chinese fortitude is represented in this picture, following a Japa-nese raid on the Singapore area. A Chinese woman, her foot crudely band-aged, sits in the ruins of her home. Only the frail bamboo and palm roof stand. Since the fall of Singapore, the Japs have captured Bata-via and Bandong in the Dutch East Indies, and have landed in New Guinea, 400 miles from Australia.

Baltimore Board No. 5 Has Most Registrants

BALTIMORE, March 10. (AP)—It's getting to be a habit with Baltimore County's Local Board No. 5—having the top number of draft registrants in the country.

The board topped the nation in both previous registrations, thus setting the highest effective serial number to be used in the lotteries. And in this registration, the board has 4,720 men signed up, a figure experts believe will again top the nation. The board is in a heavy de-fense industry area.

The original Capitol grounds at Washington, were once occupied by the Powhatan Indians, a sub-tribe of the Algonquins.

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

TRANSPLANTING TIME FOR VICTORY GARDENS

Under proper conditions of soil, light, moisture, air and temperature, young seedlings will make a sturdy growth. When they become long-legged and spindly the cause can usually be traced to lack of light and crowding. To remedy this condition, place the seedling closer to the window and thin the plants somewhat. Vegetable seedlings resemble the true leaves in either shape or size. The first transplanting should be made from one flat to another. A second transplanting can be made later either into another flat, spacing the plants further apart again or, better still, into paper pots, berry boxes or some other individual containers.

Premature birth caused the death of 32,345 babies during 1940, ac-cording to the Census bureau.

Allegany Game Wardens First 'Minute Men'

Sportsmen also Volunteer for Maryland's New Militia Reserve

Twenty-five members of the Allegany County Game Wardens' Association yesterday became Maryland's first 1942 "minute men."

The Allegany wardens were the vanguard of an unexpected first-day turnout of civilian rifle and shotgun experts who paraded to state armies and Adjutant General Francis Petrott's office in response to Governor O'Connor's appeal for volunteers for the recently-created state militia reserve.

Volunteered Weeks Ago

Their application was tendered to General Petrott by Harry L. Vogel, association secretary, while several sportsmen's organizations here indicated their entire memberships would volunteer to shoulder arms soon on a "home guard" basis. The association tendered its services to the governor several weeks ago.

Ten men applied at the state armory here last night, according to Capt. Thomas P. Conlon of Company C of the Maryland State Guard, but they were told to return later in the absence of instructions of what procedure to take in enrolling them.

Among the local organizations whose officers indicated the memberships would enroll almost to a man in the new home guard were the Eight-Point club, the Square Circle Sportsmen's Association and the Cumberland Outdoor Club. The Fish Basket club has taken no definite action, but its membership is prepared to stand by for any emergency, according to Guy Bradour, president.

Many Veterans

The organized sportsmen, many of them veterans of World War I, are largely armed with high-power rifles and versed in handling them. General Petrott and Governor O'Connor both were pleased with the first day results.

"The rush was so great this morning I called Governor O'Connor for additional clerical help," the adjutant general asserted. "Throughout the day the Fifth Regiment armory was busy enrolling men while our telephones jangled constantly." General Petrott predicted heaviest enlistments will occur on weekends when "many men will be free to join up."

Reports Encouraging

Armory attendants throughout the state were instructed to be on the alert for "minute men" applicants, General Petrott said. "Forms were sent to all state guard points today and now are available for anybody interested," he added.

O'Connor declared the early reports were "most encouraging." Tuesday, he appealed for volunteers during a state-wide radio broadcast in which he emphasized Maryland, by its location, might be the victim of a "token air raid, bringing with it parachutists and saboteurs."

PHILADELPHIA, March 11 (AP)—The Celanese Corporation of America filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission today a registration statement covering the proposed sale of $7,522,000 of 3½ percent convertible debentures due March 1, 1962. The price and conversion rate, the corporation said, will be supplied by amendment.

A corporation spokesman said some of the proceeds would be used in the construction of a new plant to produce chemicals used in synthetic rubber manufacture.

Shortening of Courses for Nurses May Be Necessary To Meet Current Demand

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
The problem of supplying doctors for the army, navy and public health services as well as to keep intact medical service in civilian life was discussed in this column last week. We are also short of nurses. The problem of supplying in general. Perhaps the nursing profession will find after the war is over that they will have to revise their standards and their hour requirements.

Time Shortened

The opinion was expressed before the organization of the Volunteer Nurse Aide Corps. This organization has even shortened the time mentioned by my doctor friends, since its courses, when completed, will turn out such nurse aides in about five weeks. The total course is eighty hours, consisting of about thirty-four hours of lectures, demonstrations, the care of sick in a hospital and about forty-five hours of supervised practice in a hospital. One hour of the eighty is devoted to examinations.

Course Of Instruction

The course for the Volunteer Nurse Aide Corps includes instruction in making beds, giving baths, recording the intake of liquids and the output of urine and evacuation, assembling equipment for various simple procedures—for enemas, lavage, hot water bottles, ice bags, oxygen administration, renewing and applying casts, bandages, slings and so forth.

One item is instruction in taking temperatures, pulses and respiration, which anybody can learn and which is one of the most important pieces of information a doctor can have about a patient.

I presume the lectures or demonstrations will cover the subject of elementary first-aid, infectious fever nursing, the ordinary principles of asepsis and sterilization, the recognition and care of shock, the principles of dietetics and invalid feeding. In fact, it seems to me that it would be a very valuable course for every house mother and housewife to take, whether a war is going on or not.

Questions and Answers

V.—Will you please tell me what causes mucous to drop down at the back of the throat? What can be done to remedy the condition? Would this cause rheumatism?

Answer: This is the commonest symptom of a chronic sinus infection. The treatment is the treatment of sinus infection. It does not cause rheumatism.

GETTYSBURG WOMAN HAS BEEN HICCOUGHING FOR FIVE WEEKS

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 11 (AP)—Miss Maybelle Scott, 39, has been hiccupping for five weeks. She began hiccupping ever-thirty seconds early in February. She was taken to a hospital Sunday because she was unable to eat or sleep normally.

Her physician, who said the "five weeks is very unusual and quite remarkable," added "Miss Scott is now able to rest at intervals. The hiccups cease for an hour or so and then return for a period of hours. Between attacks she can eat regularly and get badly needed sleep."

Doctors said they could find no condition which could have caused the hiccups. The attacks now "show signs of abating," they declared.

LENTEN REDUCING DIET

Really reduces, is balanced, satisfies appetite

Breakfast
One-half grapefruit (fifty calories—Vitamin C); one Holland rusk (seventy-five calories—Vitamin B); one cup coffee—no cream or sugar.

Lunch
One cup clam chowder (200 calories); one slice toast or two soda crackers (seventy-five calories); lettuce and watercress salad (twenty-five calories—mineral oil in dressing); one cup tea—no cream or sugar.

Dinner
Average helping lean fish—broiled or boiled (150 calories—Vitamin C and minerals); two slices broiled tomatoes sprinkled with parsley (seventy-five calories); two tablespoons fruit junket—made with skimmed milk (fifty calories); one cup coffee—no cream or sugar.

nurses is simpler than that of making up the deficit of doctor material.

I sat in the other day on a conversation with a group of doctors who expressed the unanimous opinion that nurses could be trained in three months and after their training they would be able to do eighty per cent of the work that a trained nurse is now doing.

This opinion will probably be very unacceptable to directors of nurses' training schools and trained nurses

Two Baltimoreans Seek Meyer's Seat

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 11 (AP)—Two Baltimoreans are seeking the congressional seat now occupied by Rep. John A. Meyers from Maryland's Fourth district.

W. Frank Just and Joseph M. Wyatt filed their certificates of candidacy for the Democratic nomination with Secretary of State Thomas E. Jones. Meyers, also a Democrat, has not yet announced whether he will seek reelection.

Just is in the rug cleaning business while Wyatt, 36-year-old attorney, is associate magistrate of the Baltimore Traffic court.

Parents Should Train Children To Concentrate

Problem Is Very General and Vague, Dr. Myers Asserts

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In almost any group of parents during an open forum the question comes, "How may I teach my boy of 12 to concentrate?" or, "My girl so nearly helpless in attempting of 10 is such a dreamer. What may I do to teach her to pay strict attention to her lessons?"

The question gives me a feeling almost of despair because I feel an answer. The problem is so general as so vague. No one can answer it with finality. In the first place, concentration, of the lack of it, is tied up with a whole lifetime of habits. It is not a specific something we can get at, such as swearing or playing with matches or failing to say "thank you." It consists of countless attitudes and habits. We don't teach concentration as we teach spelling or memorizing.

Teaching Concentration

Your child or mine grows in ability to concentrate as he succeeds in paying strict attention to one specific activity at hand, then another, then another, and so on. Each victory will help him win another. Of course, the child who does not hear or see well might easily grow inattentive.

In teaching a child to concentrate the task is about as follows: Turn him to things to learn or do that he can do well, but which will challenge his efforts. Do everything possible to control the situation so that he will succeed and will get satisfaction from success. If he can be led to spell accurately two words of his spelling lesson he might find no difficulty in working vigorously at the other four or eight. If he finds he can read the book he borrowed from the library and get meanings from it with satisfaction, he has a motive to go on reading. But if it proves too hard for him he is likely to dream as he reads and soon to close the book and abandon it entirely.

are most likely to do is to scold the dreamy, inattentive child or to exhort him on the virtues of concentration. We would help him more by challenging him to play a game of checkers. If he played well he would at least cultivate concentration habits at the game.

The thing to do is to find out what the child can do well at home or school and to lead him to do tasks no harder. He must succeed in order to find satisfaction. As he enjoys success he is stimulated to attend more closely and to work more vigorously and win more success. We cultivate concentration in the child as we help him to win more victories when he tries to learn.

Grave of Renowned Indian Scout Is Believed Found

WELLSBURG, W. Va., March 11 (AP)—A grave believed to be that of William H. VanSwearingen, renowned Indian scout, has been uncovered by workmen grading a plot of land for residential construction.

Prof. Elza Scott, president of the Tri-State Historical Society, said steps would be taken to mark the spot, adding that a stone marking the grave was removed several years ago but probably could be recovered.

VanSwearingen served as a captain in the Continental Army under General Washington. After the Revolutionary war he moved to Washington county, Pennsylvania, where he became the first sheriff.

Subsequently he moved to the present site of Wellsburg and, according to Professor Scott, built a cabin on land now occupied by the Wellsburg high school. He died in 1793.

The Grahamtown school building, vacant for two years, was recently sold to The Brethren congregation, this city, by the Allegany School Board. The congregation has been meeting in a small building at Yates's corner, known as "Gospel Hall," since 1912. The steady growth of the congregation and Sunday school necessitated the purchase of larger quarters, members said.

Will Produce Ingredient For Synthetic Rubber

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 11 (AP)—On a tract of twelve long-living acres fringing the Kanawha river, builders began assembling materials this week for a new defense plant which officials say will be producing a basic ingredient of synthetic rubber by April 1, 1943.

What originally was projected as a 10,000-unit plant for the manufacture of butadiene has undergone drastic re-planning because of the war-imposed shortage of genuine rubber.

R. J. Stimfle, supervising engineer of the Defense Plant Corporation, explained that only the butadiene will be produced here. Together with styrene it is the basic element for producing rubber artificially.

Madeline Webb Denies Guilt In Murder Case

Former Model Described in New York Homicide
Court as "The Lure"

NEW YORK, March 11 (AP) — Her spirit broken, Madeline Webb, 28, a former model and dancer sobbed "you can't do this — you can't do this" as she was described in homicide court today as "the lure" in the robbery and strangulation of wealthy Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, a Polish refugee.

Miss Webb, who formerly lived in Stillwater, Okla.; Eli Shonbrun, 33, with whom she was arrested in a Bronx rooming house late last night; and John D. Cullen, 45, were held without bail for the grand jury on charges of suspicion of homicide.

Mrs. Reich, her mouth bound with adhesive tape and her hands and feet bound by wire, was found last Thursday in an East Side hotel apartment rented by a "Mr. and Mrs. Ted Leopold."

Miss Webb "the Lure" Miss Webb and Shonbrun were the Leopolds, said assistant district attorney Jacob Grumet, adding that the girl was "the lure" who invited Mrs. Reich to the apartment where she was robbed of $2,000 in jewelry and then slain.

Through hours of questioning, the girl who never had been quite pretty or talented enough to make the grade in big city competition, and Shonbrun had remained calm — despite the fact police had found Mrs. Reich's $1,500 five-carat diamond removed from its setting, beneath a pillow in their room.

Grumet told the court the slaying was "one of the most cold blooded murders" his office ever investigated and Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio called it "a barbarous and inhuman homicide."

Throughout an eight-hour questioning Miss Webb talked freely of herself but had steadfastly denied participating in the robbery and slaying.

Men "Petty Crooks" Shonbrun and Cullen, so far as their past was concerned, were dismissed with the expression "petty crooks with a police record."

But the girl, the holder of a bachelor of arts degree from Oklahoma A. and M. college, was described at length by authorities. Always anxious for a stage or screen career, the official report said, she had visited Hollywood and then came to New York for a career that moved steadily downward.

Young and attractive, with olive skin, black hair and sparkling dark eyes, she worked as a model for a time.

Soon she turned to modelling semi-nude for photographers and then came harder times that saw her evicted from her hotel.

Her last form of employment, of record, said the report, was dancing in the nude in cheap, after-hours night clubs.

She appeared in homicide court for arraignment, haggard, worn and without makeup after acknowledging to Capt. Edward Dillon in a police lineup:

"I have lived through the toughest week of my life, being on the lam for that week. I have had to live like a rat since that thing happened."

porary war employees "must be cared for later" and said any change in existing law should protect the reserve.

Against Merit Rating Joseph C. McCurdy, labor member of the board, said, "at the present time I am of the opinion as labor representative on the board that it would be very unwise to pass a merit rating."

At its meeting the council referred the following matters to committees:

A letter from Albert D. Hutzler of Baltimore asking that "a simplified income tax form, similar to the federal form, be used for state taxes."

A request from the Spring Grove State Hospital for funds to repair about one mile of roads within the grounds which were in such bad repair hospital officials said they were faced with "several damage suits."

Request from Auto Club A letter from George E. Keneipp, Keystone Automobile Club secretary, seeking simplification of payment of state and local motor vehicle taxes.

The council, touring state tobacco warehouses, received an investigator's report that it was "doubtful" whether both state warehouse and loose-leaf tobacco systems of marketing tobacco "can exist indefinitely for the small Maryland crop."

Cripps Ordered

agreement to the plan, would proceed on the basis of the 1940 promise of post-war dominion status. Churchill replied sharply that the envoy's talks "will proceed on the basis of the new conclusions."

Churchill was frank about the latent dangers created both by the demands of India's majority congress party for unconditional independence of all India and by leaders of the powerful Moslem minority, from which come some of India's hardest fighters, for a special autonomous status in the event of such independence.

"We must," he said, "first assure ourselves that our scheme would win a reasonable and practical measure of acceptance and thus promote the concentration of all Indian thought and energies upon the defense of the native soil."

Up to Sir Stafford

Hence, he went on, Sir Stafford, member of the war cabinet, former ambassador to Moscow and government leader of the House, has volunteered to determine on the spot whether the government plan will achieve its purpose.

It was estimated authoritatively that Sir Stafford's mission will take three months. Churchill said he would not only seek the agreement of Hindu and Moslem leaders to the independence plan, but would consult viceroys and commanders in chief on the grave military situation which finds the Japanese in position in Burma to strike at the borders of India proper.

"We must remember," said Churchill, "that India has a great part to play in the world struggle for freedom and that her help must be extended in loyal comradeship to follow the Chinese people who have fought alone."

"We must remember also that India is one of the bases from which the strongest counter-blows must be struck at the advance of tyranny and aggression."

Selection of Sir Stafford to handle the India problem on the scene brought cheers from the House, and Churchill's own cautionary words choked off debate. The prime minister expressed hope that during the mission "no words will be spoken or debates held here or in India which would add to the burden he (Cripps) has assumed . . . or lessen the prospects of a good result."

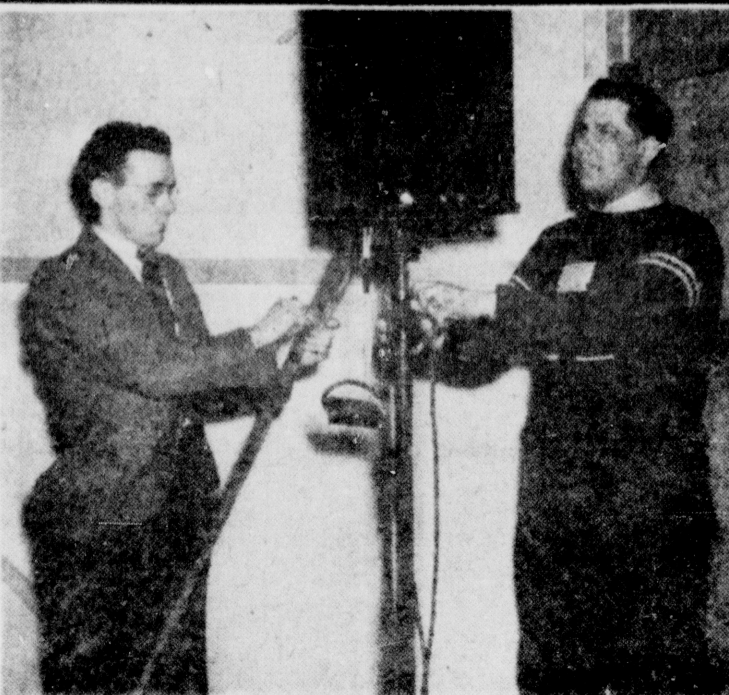

Indian sources here expressed pleasure at the choice of Sir Stafford, but some apprehension lest the government was acting too slowly "when the tiger is already smashing at our door."

Listing of Litigants Take Two Pages

The McLuckie plan is a numerous one, the equity docket in circuit court showed yesterday. It took two full pages of the docket to list the names of about 100 members of the McLuckie family who filed a routine petition for appointment of a trustee to sell property in Frostburg in which all have varying degrees of interest. The property is not susceptible of partition, according to the petition which was filed by Edward J. Ryan, attorney.

BEHIND THE SCENES—These pictures show a few of the youths who are more or less the "unsung heroes" of the Allegany high school play, "Ever since Eve," which will be presented tomorrow night. They are members of the stage crew and technical staff, who will be busy behind the scenes while the actors take the bows out front. The photograph at upper left shows Joanna Moore (left), property mistress, and Helen Frantz, her assistant, busily putting some last-minute touches on some of the properties called for by the script. They are responsible for seeing that each of the bewildering array of articles surrounding them is in the right place at the right time. Upper right, William Sparks (right), electrician, and Dixon Teter, his assistant, get together on the duties they must perform tomorrow night. The row of switches and plugs gives you an idea of the complexity of their task. Lower left are the two students in charge of the production staff, Jack Price (left) and Herbert Loyer, stage managers, adjusting a 1,000-watt floodlight. In the picture at lower right, H. C. Wickard, faculty director of the play, gives Theresa Lee Eyler, press representative, some information for a story she is writing for The News. Other members of the production staff include George Gocke, technician; Harold Harden, assistant; Ruth Fradiska, wardrobe mistress; Ann Troxell, press representative; Robert E. Gettig, chairman of ticket sale; Phyllis Seder, assistant; and Mrs. William E. Leyhe, director of reserved seat sale.

Faked Insanity William, felled by a policeman's bullet, played dead and then shot to death the officer as he leaned over him. Anthony was cornered and overpowered in a nearby tenement store.

Throughout their trial the brothers displayed manifest and nauseating symptoms of insanity, but sanity commissions ruled them sane. The Espositos were half-dragged, half carried through the prison gates ten months ago. Both had records which police called staggering and both had been behind Sing Sing's walls before.

Hunger Strike Fails The brothers have existed in sullen silence since they were brought to Sing Sing. A hunger-strike was broken by forceful feeding a few days before they were admitted to the death house.

They are virtually bed-ridden, having refused to leave their cots except when compelled by guards. They have taken food and water, but in limited amounts. And they have refused to speak to anyone.

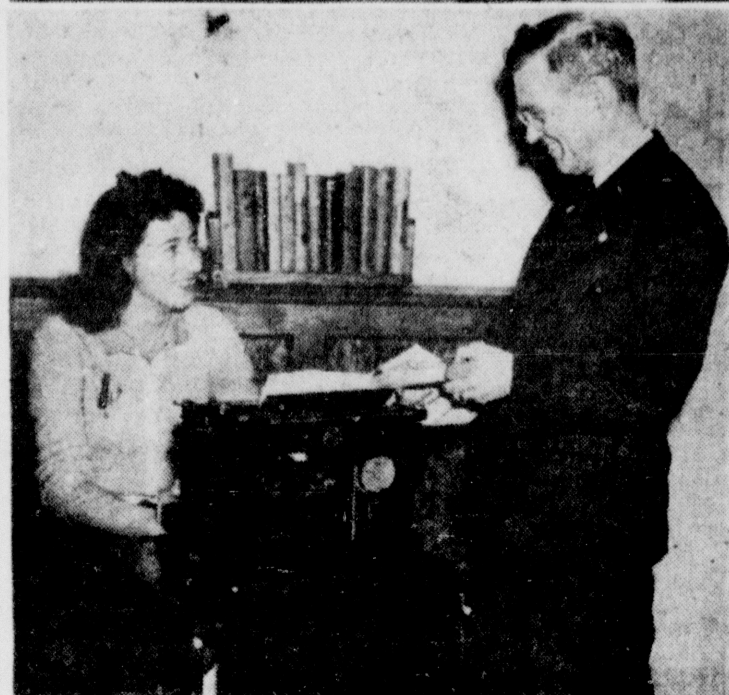

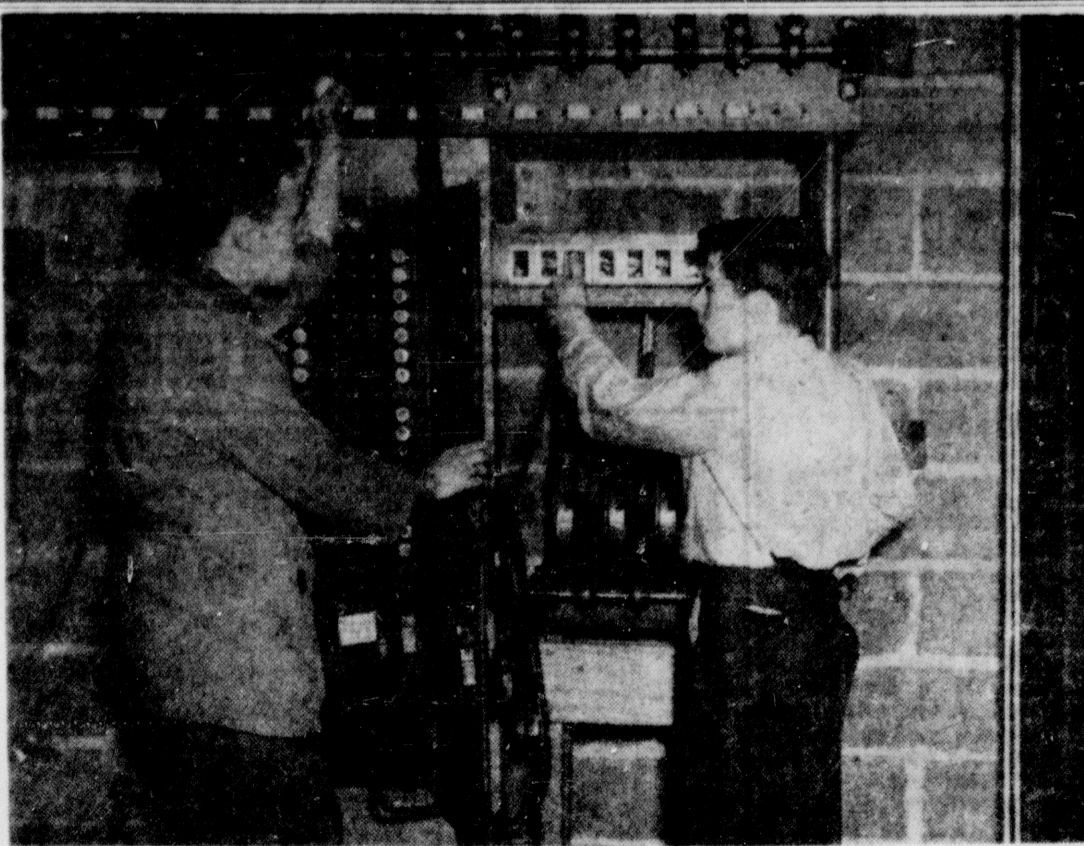

Japs Lose Seven

Air Force, now reinforced by the returned veterans of the far campaigns of the British empire, ranged far.

Aside from their violent attacks on the enemy off Salamaua, Australia, the aircraft also descended on enemy transports at Finschhafen, on the New Guinea coast above Salamaua, and while the detailed results were not observed it was known that bombs fell in the target area.

At Gasmata, an enemy flying boat was set afire elsewhere, Japanese airdromes were bombed. Australia's entire strategy became one of attack and yet attack; the effective Allied naval action, Hart disclosed, was the necessity of conveying reinforcements into areas to be defended. A total of ten convoys went into Singapore alone, he said.

"In consequence, it was, except in the later stages of the campaign, difficult to maintain surface ship concentrations to use in directly opposing the enemy's advancing forces."

"However, as the enemy's advance progressed, his distances from bases and the length of communication lines increased. There was a consequent reduction in his power, irrespective of the size of his forces."

"It was during these later stages that most of the combat involving Allied cruisers and destroyers took place, and the damage to the enemy was probably increased in consequence."

"In the end, it amounted to just that—doing as much damage to the enemy as possible, since he was able to retain the initiative throughout, and was always able to dispose forces superior to our own."

"The enemy continued his control of the air throughout and all of the fighting in which the allied cruisers and destroyers engaged was done in the face of powerful Japanese naval air forces."

In summarizing the expense of the Japanese victory, Hart said "the enemy has captured a vast territory and it is a rich country," but he declared that the allies had "effectively destroyed those properties of which the enemy had greatest need and recovery from that stage will be slow."

"The final salient fact of this campaign," he continued, "is that while the enemy has won it, captured much territory and so forth, his own expenditures have been high x x x the complications (of losses) made by the navy department are good and, as already given out, show losses in ships of various types, which with the enemy's limited capacity for replacement, are bound to be a subject for his great future concern."

In his reference to Allied losses Hart said they had not been serious except for the sinking of the Repulse and Prince of Wales. His statement that "much" of the American Asiatic fleet "remains to assist in carrying on" the war was interpreted by naval authorities to refer to personnel losses and ships damaged since no sinkings of American warships in Asiatic waters have been announced.

Walsh Rules Miners
Must Be Paid by Weight

BALTIMORE, March 11 (P)—Attorney General William C. Walsh ruled today Maryland coal miners, regardless of operator-union agreements, must be paid by weight of coal mined unless three or less miners were employed or coal was mined mechanically.

Walsh gave his opinion in a letter to Chief Mine Engineer John J. Rutledge, who said several operators contended the state law conflicted with an agreement between the George's Creek and Upper Potomac Coal Association and the International Union, United Mine Workers of America, district 16 (CIO).

Walsh said the agreement referred to contained various references to "the weighing or measuring of coal" and "contemplates that there are certain instances in which coal should be measured rather than weighed in determining the wages to be paid."

GIANT NEW ORE CARRIER LAUNCHED

The 639-foot iron ore freighter Leon Fraser, first of five new carriers under construction for the Pittsburgh Steamship Company, slides sideways into the water, above, at its launching at the Great Lakes Engineering Works in Ecorse, Mich. Two sisterships are still under construction at Ecorse and two others are being built at Lorain, Ohio. The five vessels will be the largest on the Great Lakes. On a single trip they will be able to carry enough iron ore to build eight destroyers. Each can carry 18,600 long tons of ore.

WE CAN'T EAT OUR CAKE
—AND HAVE IT TOO!

AS you well know, all of us are going to have to make many sacrifices if our country is to have the equipment necessary to win this war. Your electric service and electric equipment are no exceptions.

Fortunately we have at present plenty of electricity available. Use it as you need it, but use it wisely and without waste. Remember that electricity drives the war production machinery.

★ CALL ON US FOR HELP ★

To meet your needs today, we have adapted our free customer services to your war needs. These are the services that have proved so useful to many of you in the past. Through them we can help you find more effective and economical ways of using and maintaining your electric equipment—ways that will often mean more to you for what you pay. Don't hesitate to call on our knowledge and experience. Whether your problem is great or small, in HOME, STORE, FACTORY or on the FARM, these services cost you nothing and may prove very valuable to you.

★ CAN YOU BUY APPLIANCES? ★

Yes! Reasonable stocks of most electric appliances are available. These are being sold and will continue to be sold in accordance with government regulations.

★ NO NEW LINES WITHOUT GOVERNMENT O. K. ★

No more extensions of electric lines can be made except for war purposes or for the public health and safety. Materials may be obtained only to operate, maintain and repair the existing system and to connect customers to existing lines. But no large line extensions are allowed except with government permission.

★ ABOUT YOUR POWER SUPPLY ★

Your electricity comes from power stations which at present are capable of taking care of ALL your needs. This favorable situation is due to the recently built Cumberland plant and new improvements in our Williamsport plant.

In telling you about these things, we have only one purpose—to let you know what you can expect of us and to offer you our help. We have eaten only a part of our cake of resources. Let's save as much as possible by making the most of what we have.

This is the first in a series of four advertisements dealing with the effects of the war on your electric service, and describing special customer services available to you.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

SEEK THE BEST SCORE
RUBBER players who don't like duplicate would help themselves by giving that game an occasional whirl. Perhaps the greatest thing duplicate can do for your rubber bridge is to teach you the value of seeking the most profitable contract on each deal, instead of merely the first good contract you see in sight. In the long run, a player who gains the extra points for heart and spade games and slams will have quite an advantage over the fellow who would just as soon make them in minor suits.

That hand was originally dealt in a game of four good rubber players. The bidding was as given, up to East's 2-Spades, but then South, who had learned his partner had a club suit, shown in a hand good enough for a free bid, hopped at once to 5-Clubs. It was made, plus an extra trick.

Notice the greater artistry of the bidding tabulated above, done by a pair of fine duplicate players when the deal was copied and put in duplicate boards. See especially South's second call of 3-Diamonds. That put North in position for a No Trump game call if he had spades stopped. When North, however, merely showed a heart preference, it advertised lack of safe spade stoppers, also exactly three hearts, as with four he would have raised hearts the first time instead of bidding clubs.

South, having five of his suit, considered North's three enough to make a mild slam try then by cue-bidding the hostile spades. Note that, though the pair was using the Blackwood convention, he did not employ it this time, as the number of aces held by North was not so important as whether he held an ace in one of the minors. North would not have cue-bid his club A except with some other honor strength in hearts or diamonds. The heart K was just enough. Let's not comment on East's bad double. It merely made sure South would play the hand the way he should anyway. As the cards lay, the diamond A was the only loser after West led the spade 7 to the A. South ruffing.

Building an American Rubber Supply

TAPPING: A worker at the Plant Introduction station collects the latex from an 11-year-old guinea pig tree.

TESTING: Laboratory technician weighs samples of latex on gram scale to determine individual tree output.

AP Feature Service

MIAMI, Fla. — Twelve hundred "guinea pig" rubber trees are working full time today producing for Uncle Sam new types which will inject vim and vigor into the rubber-producing potentialities of Central and South America.

The little-known, 150-acre Plant Introduction Station here is the only government-operated station in the country devoted to study of natural rubber production. Experts have been on the job quietly for 17 years but their work has been spotlighted suddenly by war and the nation's urgent need to replace Far Eastern rubber sources.

Give Your Feet An Ice-Mint Treat

Get Happy, Cooling Relief For Burning Calluses—Put Spring In Your Step! Don't groan about tired, burning feet. Don't moan about calluses. Get busy and give them an Ice-Mint treat. Feed the comforting, soothing goodness of Ice-Mint driving out fiery burning, aching tiredness. Rub Ice-Mint over those ugly hard old calluses, as directed. See how white, creamy-like Ice-Mint helps soften them up—chase them away. Get foot happy today the Ice-Mint way. Your druggist has Ice-Mint.

Under the direction of H. F. Loomis, associate agronomist, the staff has been able through careful grafting to increase the output of latex (the sap from which rubber is made) from three pounds per tree to 30 pounds. It takes 14 pounds of latex to make an ordinary tire.

Further, the 1,200 mature trees now are turning out 900,000 saplings annually for transplanting in Latin America.

The finest seeds, buds and bud sticks from Malay and Latin American rubber plantations are sent here via the United States Government Inspection House at Washington.

All latex is of the same approximate quality, so the research stresses increase of quantity.

The average rubber plantation grows 100 trees per acre, and the stepup means that the acreage yield will be increased from 300 to 30,000 pounds annually.

Loomis says it would take about 20 years for rubber plantations in Central and South America to supply this country's present need for 600,000 tons a year. But every production increase means that much less rubber has to come from other less-prolific natural sources and from synthetics.

Nazis Investing Heavily in East Indies Stocks

Move Seen as Attempt To Keep Japs from Getting Control

LONDON, March 11 (AP)—Heavy buying of Netherlands Indies stocks in German-occupied Amsterdam is interpreted by Aneta, Netherlands news agency, to indicate that German and Dutch Nazis are seeking to keep the Japanese from acquiring complete economic domination of the East Indies, which they now control.

The Germans have gone heavily into the market to buy out the stock of companies in territories now occupied by Japanese troops, the news agency said. The result in

"It is known that when Germany invaded Holland in May, 1940, the Nazis thought that Holland's Far Eastern territory would fall into their laps," Aneta said.

"Dispatches from Bandoeng last week reported the belief prevalent there that the Japanese had double-crossed the Germans in invading the East Indies x x x That Berlin had originally counted on a Japanese attack on Soviet Siberia, rather than a drive into the Southwest Pacific."

"Now that the Japanese have established their hold in the Indies, the Nazis are apparently trying to make the best of the situation by seeking to effect economic penetra-

Ridgeley Cage Tournament Starts Tonight

Capon Bridge Hi, Fort Ashby Five Clash in Opener

Parsons and Moorefield Sections To Be Launched Tomorrow

West Virginia sectional basketball tournaments, with the winning teams eligible to compete in the regional event to be staged at Clarksburg next Friday and Saturday, will get under way tonight at Ridgeley and tomorrow at Parsons and Moorefield.

A single contest this evening at Ridgeley will launch the Ridgeley section at Ridgeley high school. A Class B event, the opening tilt will find Capon Bridge and Fort Ashby clashing for a place in the semi-finals, which will be staged tomorrow night. The championship contest will take place Saturday night at 8:30 following the third-place game at 7:30.

The Capon Bridge-Fort Ashby winner will tangle with Piedmont at 7:30 tomorrow night while in the other semi-final, Coach Bill Hahn's Ridgeley aggregation will square off with Elk Garden at 8:30.

Many Awards Offered
The winning team will receive the sectional trophy of the West Virginia High School Athletic Association and the tournament basketball donated by the Wilson Hardware Company. The Ridgeley Lions Club will award a trophy to the runner-up team while a third-place consolation cup will be given by the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club. A sportsmanship award, donated by Dr. J. B. Martin of Ridgeley, will be presented to one of the five teams.

Melvin M. Heiskell, Ridgeley high principal, is director of the tournament while Howard Neiditt will be official scorer and Ed Acheson, official timer. "Huck" Miers will referee tonight's game while Joe Gilmore will handle contests Friday and Saturday.

Ridgeley and Piedmont are expected to meet in the finals with Coach Hahn's host team slightly favored to cop top honors. In home-and-home games this season, Ridgeley and Piedmont split with the latter winning 25-25 after a 23-22 setback.

The Class A tournament at Parsons will be ushered in tomorrow afternoon with Franklin opposing Harris Valley of Mill Creek at 2 o'clock. Tomorrow night's session will open at 8 o'clock with the co-favorites, Davis and Parsons, clashing for a finals berth. One hour later, Thomas, the "dark horse", will oppose the Franklin-Tygart Valley survivor. The finals are scheduled for 9 o'clock Saturday night.

Keyser Plays Tonight
Two games Friday night will include the Moorefield sectional. Circleville will tangle with Bayard and Wardsville will meet Mathias. Saturday afternoon, Petersburg will oppose the Circleville-Bayard victor and Moorefield will take on the Wardsville-Mathias winner. The title battle will take place Saturday night.

The Shepherdstown Class B sectional was completed last night while Martinsburg and Charles Town met in a game launching the Martinsburg Class A tournament, which will continue tonight and end tomorrow evening.

The Keyser High Golden Tornadoes, which have won twenty of twenty-five games this season, will open a bid for state honors tonight at Martinsburg. Coach John Shelton's Keyserites topped only by Parsons' Panthers, are prohibitive favorites to carry off top honors.

The five teams capturing sectional honors at Shepherdstown, Ridgeley, Parsons, Martinsburg and Moorefield will compete in regional Class A and Class B events to be staged next week at Clarksburg. The victors at Clarksburg will move on to Morgantown the following week-end to determine state championships.

Shepherdstown Wins Sectional

Redrawn Club Turns Tables on Hedgesville with 23-22 Victory

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W. Va., March 11.—Shepherdstown high school woodmen turned the tables on Hedgesville high's passers here tonight to capture the Section 6 Class 2 Class B sectional tournament and earn a place in the regional tournament opening next Friday at Clarksburg.

Shepherdstown, which lost to Hedgesville by eleven points in the first round, nosed out the visiting team, 23-22, in an extra period with full loss by Skinner deciding the tie.

The champions, redrawn after losing to Hedgesville, were ahead by twenty seconds remaining in the regular tussle when Ash of Hedgesville dropped in a goal to send the contest into extra time.

In the overtime period, Skinner fouled under the Hedgesville net while shooting and was awarded two shots. He missed the first but sank the second to give team another crack at state honors.

Scientists Find That Reflexes Mean Difference between Champs, Chumps

By IRA WOLFE
We do not intend to unquiet your nerves so soon before income tax day, but the basic difference in quality as a fighter between Joe Louis and, say, Abe Simon or even you, pal, is so small that scientists are unable to measure it.

The scientists, even when in dollar seats, can measure what that difference does. The results of that difference are plain and do not require a yardstick, but can be measured in milestones. However, the quality that makes Joe Louis a champ outgrades the quality that makes you yourself by so much that a decision that no instrument yet devised would be able to calibrate it.

Says Prof. Pitkin
Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, Columbia's "life at forty" man, is our teacher on this. He proves that the difference between a champion and a cluck is the difference in the speed with which messages travel along the nerve paths.

When a boxer sees an opening or sees danger on its way towards him, when a ball player sees a ball making progress in his direction, the eyes of some absorb a message to that effect and bundle it off to the mind. In the mind, the message becomes the subject of deliberations. A plan of action or reaction is evolved and a whole series of messages is dispatched to the muscles of the body required to put the plan into being.

Sample of such messages from the brain: "To the left arm, attention of triceps extensor cubiti. Dear T. E. C.: Danger threatens us. Please bulge." "To the right thigh, attention of gluteus minimus. Dear G. M.: Just a line to let you know we are all counting on you to get a move on." Etc. And, as a result, a man is knocked out, a home run is hit or one of Abe Simon's simonizers wastes its polish a mile away from the target. Or, if one of the messages is slow and another right behind it fails to pass on the left but just rams on through you will get a sentence as a friend pulled in describing how crazy California drivers are: "There I was expediting the need limit and they went by me like Barney Oldfield tied to a post."

Short Cuts Win
In all people, these messages travel with the speed of electricity—rumored to be something like 12,000 miles a second, a rate that motorcycle cops do not refer to as speeding but describe as low flying. In trained athletes, these messages take a short cut. That is one of the things training is for—to develop what are called habits, instincts and patterns of reaction or—by the light crowd—reflexes so that messages do not have to travel the whole inch or two from the eyes to the mind and back down through the body, but can be reacted upon by nerve centers nearer the scene of action. You wouldn't think anything speeding along at 12,000 miles a second would notice a spare inch or two, but you'd find out if you got into the ring with Louis.

So by training the messages save time and become, instead of a matter of fractions of a second, practically instantaneous. And then every once in a while, someone comes along whose nerve paths are a fast track or consist of high iron along which messages can be high-balled in less time than instantaneous and you have a champion, making everybody else in the business seem miles away and look as if they are late and ought to be never.

Well, now you know the exact reason why Abe Simon will get knocked out by Joe Louis March 27, why Ted Williams is better with a bat than anybody else in either league has been in eleven years and just what a sportsman means when he says "outclassed."

We intend to continue in this vein tomorrow, so don't say you haven't been warned.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Lesnevich Given Slugging Lesson

Cleveland Negro Earns Decision over Light-Heavy Champ

By RAY BLOSSER
CLEVELAND, March 11.—Jimmy Bivins gave Gus Lesnevich a slugging lesson tonight to win a decisive ten-round verdict over the light-heavyweight champion in a non-title bout. The winner weighed 176½ and Lesnevich 178.

The Cleveland negro, who drank a quart of water in order to scale over the 175 pound limit, turned loose his artillery to knock the champion down briefly in the second round.

Bivins also bloodied Lesnevich's nose, and opened a wide cut under the titleholder's right eye in the fourth as he captured six rounds, with one even and the other three going to Gus.

Beating him was soundly beaten. Gus came back to make his best showing in the last round, hurting Bivins with an uppercut and rushing him constantly—but he didn't get in the haymaker he needed.

It was a right to the jaw that floored the Cliffside Park, N. J., fighter in the second—to the applause of most of the 9,429 customers who pulled $22,892 from their pockets for the privilege of seeing the slam-bang match. The champion got up, however, before there was any count. Gus also slipped to one knee in the fourth while dodging a blow.

Bivins's good scrap may have earned him a title go against Lesnevich, who is scheduled to report this weekend to the Coast Guard as a carpenter, third class, with the expectation of getting enough time off to continue the kind of fighting where there's a referee.

Abramovic Gathers 33 Points as Salem Bows to W. Virginia

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., March 11.—Salem's unstoppable John "Brooms" Abramovic was that way again tonight, but while he was racking up thirty-three points to top off a national individual scoring record for one season, West Virginia university presented three dribblers who scored twenty or more points and the Mountaineers won, 77 to 63.

Brooms's thirty-three points, on eleven field goals and eleven fouls, gave him a twenty-four-game total of 718—only one field goal short of a sizzling average of thirty a game. This was seventy-six points more than the previous record of 632 held by another West Virginian, Kenny Griffith of Alderson-Broadway, at Phillip W. Va. last year.

Included in Abramovic's season is another all-time individual mark—fifty-three points scored in one game, against West Virginia Wesleyan in an overtime encounter two weeks ago.

Cincinnati, March 11.—Ival Goodman, of the Cincinnati Reds, a right-hander all his life, plans to try left-handed throwing this year to relieve the strain on his other arm.

Grantsville Cagers Claim Garrett County Basketball Laurels

GRANTSVILLE, March 11.—Coach Bill Grimm's Grantsville high basketball team today laid claim to the Garrett county scholastic championship.

The local passers base their claim on a 27-20 victory over Oakland high cagers here last night. Oakland trounced Grantsville 31-14 in the first meeting but a dispute over an alleged ineligible player used by the Oakland school has prompted Grantsville, which has won nine of sixteen games, to claim the crown.

Last night's game was a see-saw affair with Oakland leading 5-2 at the quarter and 17-16 at the end of the third round and trailing 12-11 at the half. Gordon McKenzie had eight points for Grantsville and Gene Rook a dozen markers for Oakland. The lineups:

Harris Believes Boudreau Will Make Good Pilot

Former "Boy Wonder" Manager Praises New Indian Leader

By JUDSON BAILEY
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—The best judge of Lou Boudreau, the "Boy Wonder" manager of the Cleveland Indians, is Stanley Raymond (Bucky) Harris, the "Boy Wonder" manager of the Washington Senators in 1924.

The best judgment of one "Boy Wonder" on another is that the 24-year-old manager of the Indians will get along all right.

"I like the way he handles himself," said the no.-greying Harris, who managed Washington to two pennants in succession in 1924-25. "He has the stuff that managers are made of."

"People keep asking me if managing the club will hurt his playing. My answer is 'no—not right away,' at least."

"As a matter of fact, being the manager probably will fire him up for the next couple of years, or maybe longer. He'll be trying so hard that his own playing will be good. Maybe after that first thrill of being manager wears off, he will worry more about the gambles that he is taking, but that is something that will come later."

Pitchers Will Be Problem
"At the start you shake up your lineup and you take chances on players and on situations and the breaks seem to come easy. Later they get tougher and you weigh the responsibility more. But that shouldn't affect Boudreau now. He ought to do well."

The Bucky, who was an up and coming second baseman when Clark (The Old Fox) Griffith named him to succeed Donie Bush as pilot of the Senators at the age of 23, singled out Boudreau's biggest task: "His toughest problem will be handling his pitchers. He has good advisers, but nobody except he can say when a pitcher should come out of that box."

"I know from experience. When I broke in as manager I still had Walter Johnson, one of the greatest hurlers that ever lived, and what I am about to say I say with all respect to him."

Harris Learned Lesson
"But I remember my first year that I used to see Walter weakening just a little bit and I, with the admiration of a kid speaking to his elder, would ask, 'Walter, how do you feel?'"

"And I remember that Walter always gave me the same answer, 'Bucky, just let me pitch to one more batter.'"

"Then the next batter would belt the ball some place away from where we were and after the first year I learned my lesson."

Harris also acknowledged that one of the big questions facing Boudreau was his career as a player. He should remain one of the star shortstops of the American League for ten years, but no manager in the history of the Cleveland Indians ever has lasted that long. When asked if the end of Boudreau's tenure as manager would jeopardize him as a topnotch player for the Indians, Harris, who himself was shuttled off to Detroit and then to Boston after his great start as a playing manager of the Senators, declared:

"Yes, that's a problem. But I'll bet Boudreau is glad to take the chance."

Woodmen Will Battle Windber Here Sunday

Cumberland Woodmen of the World basketballers, who have lost only four of nineteen games this season, will oppose the Windber (Pa.) Eureka Stores quint on the SS. Peter and Paul school court next Sunday night at 9 o'clock.

The Woodmen, strengthened by the addition of Milt Athey, Allegany high captain the last season, tripped the Connelville (Pa.) Overholts here last Sunday.

The Windber outfit is composed of ex-collegiate and scholastic players and holds victories over some of the outstanding teams in Central Pennsylvania.

In the preliminary, the Cumberland Hurricanes will exchange baskets with the Cumberland Blues starting at 7:30.

In 1933 Amerino Sarno, Italian right tackle from Everett, Mass., blocked a kick for a safety that gave Fordham a 2-to-0 triumph over Alabama. Eight years later, Alex Santilli, right tackle also of Italian extraction and also from Everett, Mass., blocked a punt for a 2-to-0 Fordham victory over Missouri. HOW THEY LOOK IN THE MAJORS

JACK SORDS SIZES UP THE BIG LEAGUE TEAMS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of sixteen cartoons and articles on the major league races.

By WALTER L. JOHNS

NEW YORK, March 11.—(Central Press)—The Yankees, as usual, are ticketed for the pennant. That's not news, but it's always best to make that known before scanning the latest edition of the defending champions.

Material and a good coach combine to make the top football teams. The same, naturally, holds true in other sports, and baseball is no exception.

The Yankees have a good "coach," Joe McCarthy's pennant "batting" average is in the super class, sporting a six out of eleven record since he took over the field destinies of the New York club in 1932 when the Cubs cut him loose. And he's hot now, for the Yanks have won pennants in five out of the last six years.

Pitching Needed
The material, revitalized each year, still is as strong if not stronger, than most of the other clubs can put on the field and, with the Yankee farm system what it is, more rookie contingent isn't large, but the accent is on the pitchers where the accent needs to be.

The Yanks won the American league race last season by seventeen games, breezing in near the tag end. What's to prevent that kind of a team from doing it again with added help on the firing line, where the Yanks were weakest last year?

The Yanks had no twenty-game winner last season. Their best pitcher was Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, who won fifteen games against five losses. But Gomez, thought through last year, has the same fight on his hands to gain a regular starter's job. Red Ruffing, who has been the Yankee ace for several years, won only fifteen games last season. Big Red is nearing his thirty-eighth birthday.

Other Yank regulars are Marquis Russo, a fine southpaw; Ernie Bonham, Marvin Breuer, Norman Branch, Spud Chandler, Alcy Donald and the relief specialist, Johnny Murphy.

Rookie Hurlers Listed
The rookie list is impressive with John Lindell, six-foot-four, right-hander from Newark, topping the list. Lindell won twenty-three games last season against only four losses. Second in line, according to training camp reports, is Hank Borowy the ex-Fordham hurling star who won seventeen for Newark last season.

Other hurlers being looked at are Mel Queen, who won fourteen for Binghamton; Rinaldo Ardizioia and Mito Candini, from Kansas City and Allen Gettel, also from Newark. There isn't a southpaw in the lot. In fact, only Russo and Gomez are portside twirlers on the Yankee roster.

The war has taken Johnny Sturm, regular first sacker last year; Pitchers Steve Peck and Charley Stancu, two fine twirlers, and Catchers Ken Silvestri, Boader, Tommy Henrich, the home-run-hitting star last season, is classified in 1-A and he may be lost to the club.

Bulldogs Advance to Semi-Finals by Trimming Charles Town

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., March 11.—The Martinsburg High Bulldogs earned a shot at the favorite in the Section 8, Region 2, Class A scholastic basketball tournament, which opened here tonight, by turning in a 41-25 victory over the Charles Town High Purple Panthers.

The Bulldogs, by winning, reached the semi-final round and tomorrow night at 7:30 will tangle with the favored Keyser High Golden Tornado quintet. In tomorrow evening's other semi-final at 8:30, the Berkeley Springs High Indians and Romney high will begin tourney play after drawing byes.

Martinsburg got away to a 7-5 lead in the first period, outscored the Panthers ten to seven in the second heat for a 17-12 edge at the half, matched the visiting outfit point-for-point in the third quarter, which ended 25-20, and then staged a garrison finish to gather sixteen points in the final period to Charles Town's five.

Stewart Laddow sparked the Bulldog offensive with sixteen points on seven field goals and two free throws while Peet Vickers and Andrews accounted for all but one of Charles Town's eight baskets. The lineups:

Sixty Colts Eligible To Run in Preakness

Alsab Nominated For $50,000 Race At Pimlico May 9

Warren Wright's Calumet Farm Names Five Three-Year-Olds

By MASON BRUNSON

BALTIMORE, March 11 (AP)—Sixty three-year-olds, including Alsab, the 1941 juvenile king, and most of the colts that battled him for that honor, are eligible for the $50,000-added Preakness stakes to be run for the fifty-second time at Pimlico May 9.

The Maryland Jockey Club, announcing the nominations for its richest race, said thirty-three interests were represented. Warren Wright's Calumet farm, whose Whirlaway won the Preakness last year, led the list with five nominations.

W. E. Boeing and Col. E. R. Bradley named four horses each, while William Woodward, Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloane, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Louis B. Mayer, Alfred G. Vanderbilt and William Ziegler, Jr., each nominated three.

Alsab Lone Sabath Entry

Alsab was the lone entry from the Albert Sabath stable. The little colt, winner of fifteen races and $110,600 last year, hasn't been able to win this season but his good fifth to older horses in the Widener was heartening to his supporters.

Wright nominated hard-hitting pair in Some Chance and Sun Again. Between them they won nine races and earned $126,495 in 1941. Others named by the Calumet farm were Whiskbone, Pharaoh and Col. Teddy.

Mrs. Whitney's Greentree stable also has a couple of smart colts in Devil Diver and Shut Out. This pair accounted for seven races last year and earned a total of $82,569. Best known among the Bradley nominees is Bless Me, remembered for his great race in the Walden at Pimlico, when Alsab was all out to beat him by a head. The colt hasn't started a horse in the Preakness since 1940 when his Bimelech won.

Race Worth $64,310

Other 1941 stakes winners nominated include William Woodward's Apache and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars's Dogpatch.

Notable absentees include Re-quested, winner of the Flamingo, Bright Willie, American Wolf and Incoming, all conquerors of Alsab in Florida this winter. Contradiction, winner of the Pimlico Futurity, Black Raider, Fair Call and Chuckle.

Their owners may make them supplementary entries, however, by paying a fee of $1,500 by April 15. Counting the $50,000 added money and subscription fees of $14,310 the Preakness now is worth $64,310. The total will be swelled by the $1,500 supplementary entry fee and $500 starting fee.

How They Look

ing post behind Bill Dickey and Buddy Roser.

Priddy to Third?

At first base, Manager McCarthy was expected to use Buddy Hassett, left-handed batter who hit for .296 for the Braves last season. But now, the much-publicized Ed Levy, from Kansas City, is in the Yanks' St. Petersburg camp, and may figure in the plan. Levy, who was known as Ed Whittier last season, hit .309 during the time he was with the Kansas City club in 1941. He still is the property of that club.

Joe Gordon is the second baseman and Phil Rizzuto the shortstop. At third, Red Rolfe is the regular fixture, but Manager McCarthy is reported toying with the idea of trying Gerald Priddy, the other half of that Rizzuto-Priddy second-base combination, at the hot corner. Besides, Rolfe, getting older, has been bothered by an ailment which kept him out some last season. Frank Crosetti still is around to help out.

In the outfield, the lineup is the same, with the possible change in right field if Henrich goes. Gene Moore was bought from the Braves and Mike Chartak was called in from Kansas City, where he batted .293 last season. Joe DiMaggio, Charley Keller and George Selkirk are the regular gardeners.

The Yanks again have holdout trouble, with DiMaggio and Rolfe now left on the list.

The Florida Turmoil

Miami Beach, Fla., March 11 — The sedate citadel of Daytona Beach soon will be in the middle of a turmoil. They used to say of Atlanta that wherever his horses trod no blade of grass ever grew again. And today where Larry MacPhail enters, silence abhors a vacuum.

In laying siege to Florida's east coast, picking up new feuds day by day, MacPhail lets you know he has a better ball club than Brooklyn had last year — and that one was good enough to win the pennant.

Neither MacPhail nor Durocher can see how Cardinals and Reds, their two main challengers, are any better than they were last season. They figure Giants, Cubs and possibly Pirates have improved — but not enough. They will have to come from too far behind.

"We have a better Brooklyn ball club by two ways than we had a year ago," MacPhail said. "By the first way I mean physically. Over the second way I mean better spirit. That drive we had to make down the stretch last fall gave the Dodgers a new baseball soul. It brought them together. They are now all for one and one for all. They don't believe they can be whipped. That doesn't mean they are taking anything for granted."

"I've never seen a team get into such fine physical condition so quickly. In this respect they are well ahead of any other team in either league. They are keen for the season to open so they can begin proving they are champions who belong. No team can win a pennant without hustling, and this bunch will keep hustling all the way."

"Isn't your club beginning to get a trifle gray around the edges?" I suggested. "I mean just a little old."

Mr. MacPhail fixed me with his glittering eyes. "We have youth and experience perfectly mixed," he said. "I'll admit a few of our pitchers are no longer kids. But we still have as much speed as any team in the league — as much speed and more power. What else can you ask for?"

Arky Vaughan will be a big help. Johnny Rizzo won't hurt us. And I never saw Dolph Camilli with as much pep as he has today. Camilli was a good ball player last season. He will be a better ball player this year.

"How many teams in our league can give out batting power to compare with Camilli, Vaughan, Medwick, Herman — plus Pete Reiser? And I can include Walker and Rizzo. This will be a better run-making club than it was in 1941. It also will be a better defensive club."

There was little use in asking MacPhail whether all this indicated another pennant.

"The Cardinals are not a soft touch," he said, "but they won't score enough runs. Neither will the Reds. The Giants lack pitching strength. I look for the Cubs to be a big improvement with better pitching and a better or more seasoned infield. Nivkoff will have to wreck a lot of fences to make up for his weakness in other ways. And he wrecked a few fences last season in the National League."

MacPhail looks for a big baseball year.

"No one can be sure of anything," he said, "but I know the vast mass of people will need healthy entertainment — and outside diversion — more than ever in our history. There certainly can be no sense in endless brooding over the world we know to-

Four-Ball Golf Tournament Won By Keiser, Harper

Pair of Workaday Links-men Defeat Grout and Loving, 4 and 3

By JOHN WILDS

MIAMI, Fla., March 11 (AP)—Herman Keiser and Chandler Harper, a pair of workaday golfers who got to the finals over the toughest route, won the Miami Biltmore's international four-ball tournament today with a relentless display of birdies and pars.

Dove-tailing their efforts admirably, they bowled over Jack Grout and Ben Loving, 4 and 3, to win $1,000 apiece.

The winners built up a four-hole edge with a brilliant 64 on the morning eighteen and a birdie on the nineteenth, then matched the best their opponents could do for fourteen straight holes.

The first "outsiders" ever to capture the four-ball, Harper and Keiser were thirteen under par for the distance.

2,000 Spectators

Harper, quiet Portsmouth, Va., pro, applied the clincher on the thirty-third. The home course player, Loving, had rammed home a ten-foot putt for a birdie four. While nearly 2,000 spectators watched, Harper lined up an eight-foot putt, and tapped the ball straight for the bottom of the can.

It was Keiser, Akron, Ohio, teacher, who carried the load during the thrilling morning round show. He fired birdies on the third with a fifteen-foot putt, on the ninth from five feet, on the tenth from twenty-five, on the fourteenth from ten, on the sixteenth from eighteen, on the seventeenth from twenty-two and on the eighteenth after chipping dead to the pin.

Harper got the heaviest blows in the afternoon, getting birdies on the nineteenth, twenty-second, twenty-third, twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and thirty-third holes, with putts ranging from "gimmes" to fifteen feet.

Black haired Grout from Pittston, Pa., was the big gun for his team. One of his contributions was a sensational eagle two on the 437-yard thirteenth, where he sank a full eight iron shot from about 140 yards out. The ball bounced once on the green and lodged in the cup.

Giant-Killing Duo

Grout, who won his team's semi-finals match with an eagle on the thirty-sixth, had birdies today on the first, twenty-third and twenty-eighth holes. Loving's putts wouldn't drop most of the day, but he helped with under par performances on the eighteenth, twenty-second, twenty-seventh, and thirty-third.

The poker-faced victors were the tournament's giant killers. On their way to the payoff round they mowed down Craig Wood and Billy Burke, Henry Picard and Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen, the latter pair the 1941 winners.

Loving and Grout knocked off Lawson Little and Jimmy Demaree, Ky. Laffoon and Johnny Revolta, and Jimmy Hines and Willie Goggin.

Yale May Select Grid Coach Saturday

NEW YORK, March 11 (AP)—The Yale Corporation is slated to meet Saturday and do something about selecting a new football coach for Old Eli and from all indications there's a 50-50 chance that a teacher of the "T" formation will be chosen.

Two names probably will be presented for consideration. The university bloc, including most of the athletic department and certain undergraduate group, apparently favor elevating Ivan Williamson, the old Michigan player, who has been a Yale assistant coach since 1934. The grads represented by the alumni advisory committee, have been surveying coaches who have made names for themselves through recent successes.

In this category are Clark Shaughnessy of Stanford, Henry Frank of Tulsa and Frank Murphy of the University of Virginia. Bud Wilkinson, Syracuse assistant coach, also was under consideration but apparently will go to Minnesota as freshman mentor.

Interstate Race Opens April 29

Six Clubs To Compete—Evening Games Will Start at 8 p. m.

BALTIMORE, March 11 (AP)—Arthur H. Ehlers, president of the Interstate Baseball League, said today six teams would compete in the circuit this year.

He announced efforts to make an eight-club league failed when a prospective backer for the Reading, Pa., club dropped out. Ehlers had promised to take over the eighth franchise personally if a seventh team was signed.

The members, all with forfeits posted, are: Hagerstown, Md., Harrisburg, Pa., Lancaster, Pa., Allentown, Pa., Trenton, N. J., and Wilmington, Del.

The league schedule, he said, would be prepared by Bill Carpenter and submitted by mail to the club owners for a vote. It will not be ready for at least a week.

The league will start its 140-game schedule April 29, closing on Labor day.

On the matter of twilight ball, Ehlers said evening games would begin at 8 p. m., if prevailing time schedules made daylight ball possible, the games would start in daylight and be completed under lights, he said.

Before the coming of white men there were probably not less than 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 pronghorn antelopes in the United States and Mexico.

It pays to buy a Better Suit!

Men who have understood the economics of daily living have always recognized the fact that quality pays. Now they are more certain of it than ever . . . and when they buy a suit, they buy the better suit . . . because they have one eye on the future. Quality is simply wearability . . . and when you buy a Manhattan Suit, you know you have a suit that will last . . . for it's cut from quality fabrics, tailored to the most rigid specifications, and designed with seasons ahead in mind.

Local Red Cross Chapter Reports On Activities

Service Increases Ten-fold Since War Was Declared on Axis Powers

A report of activities of the local chapter, American Red Cross, since the declaration of war by the United States on Axis powers reveals that services of all types has increased ten-fold, Mrs. Louis P. Coulehan, executive secretary, said last night.

Inquiries by soldiers and sailors and their families reached a total of 118 and twenty-four ex-service cases handled in the same period. The service cases were for men who have disability discharges and wished assistance in filing claims.

Located Many Soldiers

The local chapter also handled sixty-nine inquiries regarding soldiers at different posts in the Philippines and Hawaii with sixty-five replies being received. Three of the replies notified local persons of the death of Victor Charles Tambollee, at Pearl Harbor; Platoon Sgt. J. E. Wright, on Wake Island; and Chief Petty Officer Almond, in the Philippines.

One reply was a notification that two brothers of Miss Gladys Alt, 544 Henderson avenue, were wounded with Gen. MacArthur's forces on Bataan peninsula. They are Titus L. and Russell Scott Alt, of Brushy Run, W. Va.

Twenty-five miscellaneous inquiries were made concerning soldiers and sailors in the United States, Alaska and Iceland. Eight replies were received. Three replies were received from seven inquiries of persons in Nazi-occupied countries.

Sponsor First Aid Classes

First aid classes conducted under sponsorship of the local Red Cross resulted in 563 persons completing the standard course so far while 200 air raid wardens have been given the ten-hour course of first aid.

Home nursing courses have been completed by 144 women and many more women are now taking the course. Another first aid to be taught by Miss Catherine Lippold starts March 17, at 7:30 p. m. at Gephart school. Classes will be on Tuesday and Thursday nights and persons interested may enroll.

How Wet Blanket May Become Life Of Party Is Told

Lions Club Hears Discussion of Protection against War Gases

One time that a wet blanket may be the life of the party is in the case of a gas attack, members of the Lions Club were told yesterday at their weekly luncheon-meeting at Central YMCA.

In a talk on war gases, their effects and methods of protection against them, Richard Sitzer, research chemist at the Celanese plant, explained that a wet blanket is highly useful in preparing a gas-proof room.

An ordinary 10 by 10 room, if the windows are reasonably tight, may be converted into a gas shelter by a few simple steps, Sitzer told the Lions. Closing all air spaces by stuffing newspapers or cloths into them will make the room a gas shelter to accommodate about five persons for from eight to ten hours, he said.

The wet blanket should be hung over the door in order to largely seal the room. In event the door must be opened to let someone in or out, the chemist declared.

Sitzer outlined the various types of war gases, described briefly their effects on the body, food and water and discussed protective measures. He emphasized the need for training of the general public in protection against gas attack.

Salvation Army Collects 35 Tons Of Waste Paper

Program Launched Here in December Hit Full Stride Last Month

Nearly thirty-five tons of waste-paper have been collected and sold by the Salvation Army in the salvage-for-victory campaign, members of the advisory board were told yesterday at their monthly meeting.

Although the program was launched in mid-December, it did not hit its full stride until last month, according to a report by Harold W. Smith, chairman of the Salvage committee.

Most of the proceeds from the sale of the paper and other scrap has gone into wages for labor, the report revealed, with $700 paid out for this purpose up until March 1. Between eight and fifteen men are hired daily to sort and bale the waste-paper, thus affording employment to persons unemployable for various reasons.

In addition to collecting waste-paper, the Salvation Army is also collecting other scrap material, with the exception of tin cans and plate-glass.

The monthly report of Brigadier B. L. Phillipson revealed a continued decline in the amount of transient aid, a decline attributed to the fact that war industries are absorbing many unemployed persons. During February, five were supplied with lodging and twenty-seven with meals, the report showed.

In local relief, the Army filled forty-four grocery orders and supplied eighty-four garments and nine pairs of shoes.

Brigadier Phillipson reported that thirty-five meetings were conducted for adults and forty-two for young people, in addition to two at the county jail. Youth activities at the South Cumberland outpost drew a total attendance during the month of 1,172, with an average daily attendance of about 100.

A report from Henry W. Price showed that during the month, the indebtedness on the remodeling project at the South Cumberland outpost had been reduced by $200 and the principal of the mortgage on the North Mechanic street Citadel by $100.

The budget for the coming year to be submitted to the Community Chest was unanimously approved. It showed a slight increase over last year as a result of increased prices for some commodities, Phillipson said.

Dr. E. L. Jones Jr., chairman, named a committee to investigate ways and means of financing the organization's activities pending the availability of Community Chest funds. The annual Chest drive was postponed this year until May.

The committee includes: Lloyd Rawlings, Clarence Litzberg, W. E. McDonald and Arthur J. Weber. The board also discussed plans for the youth conference to be held here May 9-10.

Father and Son Held on Serious Federal Charges

William Gellner Pulls Gun on Officers Who Were after His Son

William Gellner, 62, and his son, John Albert Gellner, 29, both of Long, were lodged in the county jail last night to await hearings on serious federal charges.

The elder Gellner is charged with resisting and assaulting federal officers with a deadly weapon, while young Gellner is accused of violating the Selective Service act by failing to report for induction into the United States Army, Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie said.

Both were arraigned last night before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett and ordered committed to the county jail in default of $10,000 bond, pending preliminary hearings today and tomorrow. The hearing for young Gellner is scheduled at 10:30 a. m. today, and that for his father at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The arrests were made by Loughrie, State Trooper Charles David McLane and a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Father Pulls Gun Out

Loughrie said the elder Gellner drew a gun and pointed it at the officers as they were taking young Gellner out of the house after arresting him in accordance with a warrant issued yesterday charging him with violation of the Selective Service act.

The incident took place on the second floor of the Gellner home in the Braddock Farms section. The officers were assisting young Gellner down the hall preparatory to bringing him to Cumberland to answer the charge when the elder Gellner came in from work, at the Queen Glass Company factory.

Loughrie said the father went into a bedroom, opened a bureau drawer and emerged from the room with a .32 calibre revolver which he aimed at the officers. There was a click, the marshal reported, but no discharge. Fortunately, the gun was not loaded.

Officers Overpower Gellner

The elder Gellner was quickly overpowered and immediately charged with resisting federal officers in the discharge of their duties and assaulting another with a deadly weapon. Another revolver and a quantity of ammunition was found in the same drawer, Loughrie said.

The story, as unfolded by Loughrie last night, was that young Gellner, formerly a motion picture machine operator, was scheduled to report to Draft Board No. 3 on March 3 for induction into the army at Camp Lee, Va.

Ignored Board's Request

Two days previously, according to the Gellner family, the young man injured his back when he fell as he was carrying a sack of potatoes down the cellar stairs. Notified of this fact, the draft board dispatched a letter to him, advising him to furnish proof of his disability on or before March 3. This letter was delivered in person by Loughrie on March 2.

When he failed to furnish such proof, including x-ray photographs of the alleged back injury and a doctor's statement, he was sent a notice of delinquency giving him until March 9 to report to the board or to furnish the required proof of disability, according to Loughrie.

When he failed to comply with these requirements, a warrant for his arrest was issued by Commissioner Avirett. In addition to charging him with failure to report on March 3 for induction into the army, it also formally accuses him of failing "to comply with the written request of the local board to furnish sworn proof of the back injury which he is supposed to have."

Plead Not Guilty

Both the defendants pleaded not guilty to the charges when arraigned before the commissioner.

The elder Gellner, if indicted and convicted for the offense of resisting federal officers and assaulting them with a deadly weapon, faces a possible sentence of ten years imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both. Young Gellner, if convicted, is subject to imprisonment for a lengthy term.

In connection with young Gellner's alleged back injury, Commissioner Avirett said he was told the officers, before attempting to remove him from his home, conferred with two physicians, who examined him and reported that there was nothing wrong with him so far as they could ascertain.
